Dewey Backs 'Some Queer Characters,' Truman Says

Governor 'Bound Hand and Foot' to 80th Congress, President Claims

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 12.—President Truman tonight opened a bitter personal attack on Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

He accused him of "lining up with some queer characters" in his campaign for the Presi' ncy, and branded Dewey the "Wall Street—'me too' candidate."

He said Gov. Dewey is "bound hand and foot" to the Eightieth Congress, and helped "light the fuse" that will blow up farm price supports.

The President berated his opponent for "refusing to get down to specific issues" and accused him of trying to reelect "every reactionary member of the Eightieth Congress.

"He certainly is lining up with some queer characters," he said. "You ought to check the voting records of the candidates he has been trying to get reelected."

Mr. Truman spoke at the Spring-field Armory after laying a wreath on the tomb of Abraham Lincoln at dusk. Earlier, in a sentimental journey through Indiana and Illinois, he mingled literary and historical reminiscences with politics.

Record crowds turned out at the whistle stops to hear him in the novel role of book critic reviewing the Midwest's Americana.

But there was no touch of sentiment in his Springfield farm speech. He accused the Republican Congress of cutting back the soil conservation program, trying to "kill" the farmer-committee system, and aiding "the speculative grain trade and shipping interests."

A torchlight parade from the St. Nicholas Hotel to the Armory preceeded the speech. More than 50,000 lined the streets as Mr. Truman passed, exceeding even the mass turnout in Akron last night.

The hall was jammed to its 5400 limit and police battled the overflow away from the door. Just before the speech, 88-year-old Mrs. Eva Minor was publicly introduced to the President. She said she drove more than 100 miles to hear him because "I liked the way he treated his mother."

Paul Douglas, the Senate Democratic nominee, joined Mr. Truman in Springfield and appeared with the President on the platform. Adlai E. Stevenson, red hot Democratic prospect for Governor, was also on the stand. Both received a plug from Mr. Truman.

He got a laugh and a cheer on his "queer characters" jab at

Coke Stevenson Backs GOP Texan For Senate

Austin, Tex., Oct. 12 (AP).—Former Governor Coke Stevenson in a formal statement today publicly indorsed the candidacy of Jack Porter, Republican candidate for U. S. Senator from Texas.

Stevenson lost the Democratic nomination for the post in an August 28 runoff to U. S. Representative Lyndon Johnson.

By Federal Court action in which he lost, he had attempted to keep Johnson off the November 2 general election ticket as the Democratic nominee.

"To those who have made inquiry concerning the next step to be taken by everyone who favors a square deal in politics and an honest upright public official, I answer that for me there is no hesitation in announcing my support for Jack Porter for United States Senator," Stevenson said.

Porter is a Houston, Tex., oil man who has begun a vigorous speaking campaign for the Senate.

Columbia Installation Pledge

Eisenhower to Further Cause of Freedom Through Education in Democratic Values

Over-Concentration Of Power by Groups And Government Cited as Dangers

Post Reporter

New York, Oct. 12. — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said today his course as Columbia University's president will be to further the cause of human freedom by education in the obvious values of democracy.

He called for enlistment in the common profession of democratic citizenship to protect free institutions against the threat of regimented statism. He warned that our freedom must be guarded against over-concentration of power either in the hands of the government or of special groups.

Architect of the mightiest military invasion in history, Eisenhower outlined his program for helping young people invade the future as he was formally installed as the thirteenth president of Columbia University. He has been on the job since June and this morning he put in two regular office working hours while the campus was on holiday.

Eisenhower forecast that Columbia, by cooperation with the community, might help develop freedom in this country—freedom from industrial strife.

Facts of Communism

He pledged a program of truly liberal education.

As one example, he said, the facts of communism would be taught at Columbia. When the truth both of freedom and statism is held before the eyes of students, he asked, "Who can doubt the choice of future Americans?"

As another example, he said Columbia would strive to develop rebels in the American tradition—"informed, intelligent rebels against ignorance, and imperfection and prejudice."

More than 20,000 persons filled seats in the great outdoor arena formed by the South Court. They gathered there under a gray, overcast sky. St. Paul's chapel bell sounded the solemn signal for the ceremony to begin at 2 p. m. Then as a band played slow marches, the colorful academic procession walked through the aisles from Butler library on the southern edge of the campus, to the steps of Low Memorial Library.

In the procession were presidents of 223 American colleges and universities, the representatives of nearly 100 others in this country, and 36 abroad. Their black caps and gowns were set off by the brilliant colors of varied hoods. A few of the robes were of brilliant red, or deep blue.

Eisenhower Grin Retained

Near the end of the procession marched Eisenhower, in black cap with gold tassel, black gown, with the purple-edged hood marking his honorary degree from Columbia. He holds 22 honorary degrees, mostly LL.D. from universities here and abroad.

Eisenhower brought to the ceremony his famous wide, slow grin, and at three points he marked it with the warm human touches frequently noted in his public appearances.

As he neared the platform made by the steps of Low Library, he saw Bernard Baruch, top-level adviser to the Government, wave from the stand where civilian and military celebrities were seated. Eisenhower tossed back an informal salute, strictly nonmilitary.

Then shortly after he started his speech, he took off his hornrimmed glasses to give an impromptu, expansive personal welcome to the crowd.

Finally, when the ceremony had

Holdup Man Slays Druggist in His Store

Nathaniel Johnson, 53, was shot to death at about 10 o'clock last night during an attempted holdup of his combination grocery and drug store at 600 3d st. sw.

Witnesses told police Johnson was shot by a gunman who wore glasses. The killer escaped by running south on 3d st. sw.

Police flashed this description of the killer: a dark-skinned Negro about 5 feet 9 or 10, between 140 and 150 pounds, with thin facial features, and wearing a light gray felt hat with a wide black band, a three-quarter length trench coat with belt, either dirty tan or olive green and with large patch pockets, and dark colored trousers.

Customer in Store at Time

A customer, Edna Muse, of 630 3d st. sw., was in the store at the time of the shooting and her story indicated the slayer may have known the druggist.

She told police the man loitered in the store while she made a purchase. She said as the druggist went to his cash register to make change for her, the man approached directly in front of the register and announced:

"Doc Johnson, this is a holdup."

Druggist Shot in Back

Perhaps the druggist turned slightly, for in a split second the gun in the hand of the bandit roared and a slug ripped into Johnson's back.

The gunman raced from the store, brushing past 13-year-old Bernard White of 302 E st. sw., who was just entering the store.

Johnson staggered several feet after he was shot and collapsed in his prescription room.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald reached the scene at 10:30 p.m. and pronounced the druggist dead. Dr. MacDonald said the bullet had entered the man's back and emerged from his chest. He said the bullet probably was from a large caliber revolver, perhaps a .45.

Immediately after police received word of the shooting, they sent a swarm of scout cars and cruisers to the scene. Police thought at first they had trapped the killer in Pleasants ct., about a block away, but their search there proved futile.

Police were ordered to emer-

ICC Authorizes Bus Fare Hike By A B & W

The Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. was authorized yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission to raise interstate bus fares between Washington and suburban Virginia points.

The changes, which become effective Friday, involve increases except in one instance, where a reduction will be made.

The AB&W did not ask the ICC for an increase in the 10-cent fare between Washington and Zone 1, which includes the various military and naval stations in Arlington County.

The ICC returned a finding of "just and reasonable" for these revisions:

For travel between Washington and Zone 2 in Virginia, an increase from 10 to 15 cents cash, or 12.5 cents if tokens are used.

Between Washington and Zone 3, cancellation of the present fare of a 12.5 cents token in favor of a 15-cent cash fare.

Between Washington and points immediately beyond Zone 3 no change in present fares, except for a reduction from 25 to 20 cents in the fare to and from Seminary, and an increase from 15 cents cash or 12.5-cent token to 20 cents to and from Runyon's filling station.

The ICC said it had no objection to the company plan to sell tokens at two for 15 cents in-

Council Takes Action

Alexandria Okays Raise to Get 'Competent' Health Officer

Alexandria City Council last night approved the proposal to raise the salary of the city's health officer to "assure employment of a competent and qualified" successor to Dr. W. Lewis Schafer.

The proposal was provided in a motion introduced by Councilman Marshall J. Beverley, authorizing the council's finance committee to set the new salary.

Under the present budget the annual salary for the health officer is $6000.

Before introducing his motion, Beverley declared; "It is obvious that we cannot get a man qualified to serve a city of this size for the money we are now paying." He did not propose a specific increase leaving a final decision up to the finance committee.

Dr. Schafer resigned last week as a result of what he termed "differences of opinion with some city officials." He later cited his low salary as one of the reasons for giving up the post.

City Manager Nicholas A. Colasanto, in formally advising the council of Schafer's resignation, said he had contacted the American Public Health Association, the American Medical Society and other groups in an effort to find a successor.

The council instructed Colasanto to issue a permit to a group of Progressive Party supporters for use of amplifying equipment

Dewey Hits 'Clumsiness' Of Truman

Employs Harsher Language Since The Vinson Peace Mission Episode

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Aboard Dewey Campaign Special, Oct. 12.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, obviously with the Vinson episode in mind, hammered away at President Truman's "clumsiness" in handling foreign affairs today.

He started out, also, to drum up votes for Republican candidates for the United States Senate.

The Republican presidential nominee told crowds in Kentucky that he did not believe in bringing partisanship into the field of foreign policy. At the same time, he accused the Truman Administration of "weakness and wobbling in that field."

"Your sons and mine," he told a gathering in Lexington, "have a right to know that they have a Government that not only wants peace but knows how to work for peace; a President who will consistently, day in and day out, support the people who are working for peace as our official representatives without undercutting them anywhere."

Change in Attitude Noted

The last was a crack at President Truman's discarded plan to send Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson on a peace mission to Moscow while Secretary of State Marshall was meeting with other statesmen in Paris to try and end Russia's blockade of Berlin.

All those aboard the "Dewey Victory Special" agree that there has been a change in the GOP standard-bearer since the Vinson project came to light. He appears to feel that Mr. Truman's "incredible conduct" calls for harsher language than he had been using, and this has been forthcoming all along the line.

In one of his talks, that in Louisville, he departed from his text to criticize the Marshall Plan as it stood before the Republicans changed it.

"The ERP," he said, "started out to be just another handout."

GOP Action Cited

Then, he said, Republican statesmanship changed the Administration's original program "into a practical measure providing that continuance depends on self-help by the nations it serves."

Republican prodding, he added, also at last brought more aid to China.

In Kentucky, today, Governor Dewey also set out to save the narrow Republican majority in the Senate.

He was told that the Blue Grass State was likely to give its 11 electoral votes to the Truman-Barkley ticket, but to send Senator John S. Cooper, a Republican, back to Washington for a full, six-year term.

Governor Dewey apparently had this in mind as he told crowds in Louisville, Lexington and Frankfort:

"Whether you vote for me or not, will you make me one promise: Will you vote for John Sherman Cooper for United States Senator?"

As the campaign train was about to pull out of Louisville, Dewey went even further, saying:

"Just forget me, but be sure to vote for Senator Cooper."

In Mount Vernon tonight, Governor Dewey called on the voters to support the "distinguished" Senator C. Wayland (Curly) Brooks and the "grand" Governor Dwight Green.

The crowds that turned out for Governor Dewey in Kentucky were considerably smaller than those

First Court Dispute

Lawyers for Patterson Will Fight Action on Minor Parts

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Attorneys for the executors of Eleanor Patterson's $16,586,571 will yesterday sought to forestall action which might invalidate the whole will if only "minor" portions are ruled out.

This first court dispute over basic issues to be presented for trial in the contest indicated an involved legal battle at the trial in which Countess Felicia Gizycka challenges her mother's will.

When opposing attorneys met before District Court Judge James W. Morris to frame the issues in the case, counsel for the countess declared they were challenging the "whole will" on previously announced grounds, including fraud, coercion, duress and the contention that Mrs. Patterson was "of unsound mind."

While attorneys for the countess said it should be left to the trial judge to instruct the jury whether there is sufficient evidence to rule out the whole will, or only portions of it, counsel for the executors insisted the "line of attack" must be selected before the trial starts.

Louis G. Caldwell, one of a battery of attorneys for the executors, said there are three possibilities involved in challenging the will, and the defendant is entitled to know just what the plaintiff is attempting to prove.

In an attempt to prove coercion, for example, he said, the opponents of the will will try to (1) prove this affected the will "in its entirety"; (2) just a part of the will, or (3) a part of the will, but a part sufficiently entwined with the balance to affect the whole will.

"So many people are dependent on this will," said Caldwell "that we must be sure any attack on this will for all time is laid at rest."

Throughout the proceedings, which concluded with Judge Morris taking the matter under advisement until Thursday, counsel for the will's executors made it emphatically clear that, "we do not concede for one moment that any part or parts of this will are invalid."

Mrs. Eleanor Medill Patterson, late owner-publisher of the Washington Times-Herald who died July 24, left that newspaper in her will to seven executives.

Countess Gizycka, daughter of Mrs. Patterson's first marriage to a Polish count, was bequeathed a

'I Am Anti-Communist'

'Vanished' Bulgarian Envoy Turns Up in Washington

By John London
Post Reporter

A suave young Bulgarian diplomat who mysteriously vanished from his post in Turkey turned up here yesterday and explained why he had fled to this country.

Dimitri Karaghiosov, 38, said he resigned as acting consul general at Istanbul "because I was anti-Communist."

"It was a question of safety first—so I fled when I got the chance," the 6-foot Bulgarian told a reporter in fluent English.

Missing from his diplomatic post since early in September, Karaghiosov appeared yesterday at the Carroll Arms Hotel here, 1st and C sts. ne. He was registered by Army officials as "in charge of the Pentagon."

The steel-gray haired diplomat laughed off reports from Ankara that he was believed to have carried secret files and codes.

"I had an idea I was to be recalled because of my lack of sympathy, shall we say, for communism," the sun-tanned diplomat explained over drinks and dinner at his hotel.

Karaghiosov, who landed in Baltimore four days ago aboard the Turkish ship Kastamonu, and was paroled here in charge of an Army Intelligence officer, added:

"I resigned on September 9 on that day because it is on September 9 that Communist Bulgarians celebrate the Communist coup d'etat of 1944.

"I wanted to express myself as of the opinion that it was far from a day for celebration."

He said he left his Istanbul office for the last time on September 8, forwarded his sealed resignation, then fled by motorboat to a friend's home on a nearby island in the Sea of Marmara. There he hid for four days, until he took a boat out to the Turkish ship, which he said was bought from the United States after the war.

Karaghiosov said he received a visitor's visa from the American

Strikers Start Back-to-Work Move in France

Railroad, Steel, Iron Workers in Revolt Against Red Leaders

Paris, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Railroad, iron and steel strikers revolted against their Communist leadership today and began a general back-to-work movement in response to pleas by Premier Henri Queueille's right-of-center government.

As the strike front cracked, the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor (CGT) demanded that the government back Russia's disarmament and atomic control proposals in the United Nations or get out of office.

Railroad workers throughout Alsace and parts of Lorraine and other eastern districts voted to end their week-old strike. At Strasbourg, the walkout was scheduled to end at midnight. Strikers at Colmar and Mulhouse returned to work.

The rail strike continued in some towns in the northern and western "Red belt," delaying trains, but no new strikes were reported.

The only bleak picture on the labor front was the walkout of 350,000 coal miners, in its ninth day and no end in sight. Union leaders organized special funds to keep the strike going.

[The Associated Press reported that dawn-to-dusk power cuts had been put into effect throughout the nation to save dwindling coal stocks. Power was cut off in many homes two days a week during daylight hours.]

Although the Communists attacked an assertion by Interior Minister Jules Moch that French strikes were financed by the Cominform, the influential newspaper France Soir reported that the Cominform sent the Reds 120 million francs (about $375,000) to help launch and finance walkouts.

Reds Again Assail 'Illegal West Mark'

Insist Blockade Of Berlin Hangs On Withdrawal

Berlin, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—The Russians served notice today that the Berlin blockade will not be lifted until the "illegal West mark" is declared invalid.

At the same time, Soviet authorities announced new maneuvers aimed at harassing the airlift, including dangerous "blind" flights in the Berlin corridors.

Speaking through their official army organ Taegliche Rundschau, the Russians said that "actually there is no blockade, but as to lifting traffic restrictions, that can be arranged easily if the illegally inaugurated Western mark is simultaneously declared invalid."

(The Western powers said yesterday that no further negotiations would be held until the blockade is lifted.

(Summer-long negotiations in Moscow and Berlin on the currency issue ended in a deadlock. It was understood the Western powers agreed to give up the West mark, provided the monetary unit used was controlled by all four occupation powers. The Russians insisted upon controlling it themselves.)

The Soviet warning at the Berlin air safety center, protested immediately by American and British officials, said "cloud flying and blind flying" practice would be held as part of the day's air maneuvers. Parachute jumping and gunnery practice also were scheduled in the corridor areas near Brandenburg and Elstal, the Russians said.

The Russians began air maneuvers last week and extended them despite almost daily protests.

Affable Talk On Berlin

British Report Stalin Praised Western Germany Unification

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Premier Stalin was so affable to the three Western envoys in Moscow on August 2 that he actually praised what the Western Allies had done to unify their three zones in Germany.

This is disclosed in the British government's 40,000-word White Paper on the background of the Berlin crisis, the first copies of which have just reached Washington.

Stalin was arguing that the Western powers had lost their legal right to be in Berlin because they had decided to set up a government in western Germany. As the British account tells the story:

Generalissimo Stalin explained at this meeting that the only real issue he had in mind in this context was the formation in the western zones of a German government.

"He did not object to the unification of the three zones, and even considered this to be progress."

Until this meeting at the Kremlin, no Soviet official had ever expressed anything but bitter hostility to the economic fusion of the western zones. Almost from the moment Secretary James F. Byrnes first proposed unifying the British and American zones, in the sum-

Moscow Proposals On Disarmament Called Empty and Vain Propaganda

(From Press Dispatches)

Paris, Oct. 12.—Disarmament is impossible in the face of Russia's "drive for world power," Warren R. Austin, No. 2 American delegate, said today before the Political Committee of the United Nations General Assembly.

The United States, he declared, disarmed "too far and too fast" after the war and now must rearm to defend itself.

He called Russia's proposals for disarmament and control of atomic energy "vain and empty" propaganda by a country which looks upon war as "a means of achieving a Communist world society."

Austin's speech drew an impassioned retort from Andrei Y. Vishinsky, chief Russian delegate.

Vishinsky, his face crimson and arms waving, accused Austin of welcoming a war with Russia and said the United States State Department was circulating "infamous lies" about the Soviet Union.

Russian Arms Proposal

He claimed the law firm of which John Foster Dulles—foreign policy adviser to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey—is a member, helped in building Hitler's war potential.

"It was the United States," he said, "which helped the Hitlerites build within a short time military bases and industrial potential for aggression. Thus Americans helped in the creation of aggression, and American banks were very active in that matter.

"The Stinnes-Thyssen-Krupp trust also played a most important part in it and another important part was played by the law firm of Sullivan & Cromwell, the law firm of John Foster Dulles, at present a member of the United States delegation and one of the most important leaders in the field of American foreign affairs."

The Russian delegate earlier in the day had offered to "put our cards on the table" if the U. N. adopts the Soviet proposal for arms reduction.

He said Russia wanted to cooperate but could not do so if one side were bolstered by the atomic bomb.

"You have the atomic bomb, that little bomb," he said. "That is not a pound of raisins. Your dear hope is that nobody else has it."

He added that if the Soviet arms reduction proposal were adopted "Russia will simultaneously submit information on its arms and armed forces."

Two Other Developments

Today brought two other developments:

1. The United States, Britain and France, worked on details of a resolution calling on the Security Council to act in the Berlin dispute. The Americans were reported growing impatient at the delay.

2. The United States, France, Britain and China teamed with four other countries in indorsing a demand that the Assembly approve the majority reports on world atomic control. Russia has fought the move from the start.

Austin told the Political Committee the Communist slogan changed overnight from "work and production" in the first postwar days to "wreck and destroy." He said that Russia through world communism is working to maintain a "state of

Eisenhower Fulfills in Columbia Career Ambition to Guide Youth Toward Leadership

In the summer of 1947, two representatives of the Columbia University trustees called on Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, then Army Chief of Staff, and urged him to accept the presidency of that famous educational institution.

To Eisenhower's protests of inadequacy, that he was not a scholar, the delegation replied: "We have many fine scholars on the campus. We are seeking a leader."

Columbia yesterday installed "Ike" Eisenhower as its thirteenth president and leader. It was a significant occasion. It dramatized Eisenhower's lifelong belief that in a democracy, soldier and teacher are striving toward the same goal—preservation of the human freedoms.

His Ideas on Education

"Ike" often has expressed to friends his ideas on education. Giving youth the common elements of education was not enough, he felt. They should be taught to realize that they had responsibilities as well as privileges under the Constitution. They should be given a grasp of our Government and of things that are vital to our national life.

It was his ambition, even when leading the Allies overseas, to retire some day from active command of young men in uniform, and to help guide them to leadership as head of a small college, in the tradition of Robert E. Lee.

The ambition has been realized, but with a large university and its tremendous problems and responsibilities. That "Ike" took on such a heavy load is another example—those closest to him say—of his supreme characteristic: selflessness.

Attitude on Politics

There are those who assert that perhaps "Ike" wants to use Columbia as a stepping stone to the White House. There's nothing in Eisenhower's career to suggest such slyness; and the facts deny it. The opinion polls of last summer made it clear that "Ike" would have been the most popular candidate for either party. Had he accepted the nomination of either party, he might well have been elected President. He rejected the opportunity.

Texas-born (October 14, 1890), "Ike" was the third of seven sons in a family descended from Swiss pioneers. He played football for the high school team, worked nights as a fireman in the local creamery. Too old at 20 to enter the Naval Academy, "Ike" won appointment to West Point.

"Ike" served out World War I as a Stateside instructor. It was not until 1941, during the Louisiana maneuvers, that Lieut. Col. Eisenhower's abilities caught the eye of Chief of Staff George C. Marshall. From then on "Ike's" rise was meteoric.

In the next four years "Ike" led the American armies through Africa and Sicily, led the Allied armies across the Channel into Normandy, and led the march to Berlin. He was a brilliant and daring commander. Churchill aptly called him a "creative, constructive and combining genius."

"I Am Not the Hero"

Now, as a five-star general, the tall, sturdy soldier with the bright blue eyes and friendly smile lighting a homely oval face, returned, and everywhere was hailed as a hero.

"I am not the hero," he told the home folks at Abilene, Kans. "I am the symbol of the heroic men you people . . . have sent to war."

Old friends of Abilene days and Army service attest that "Ike" never lost his sense of balance. He studied hard, but was not a bookworm and always loved the outdoors. He worked hard, but found time to play—poker, bridge or golf. He is versed in the classics, but loves to read Westerns. He is devoted to his wife, Mamie, to his Army officer son, John, and to his old friends.

Shortly after General Eisenhower announced he was retiring as Chief of Staff to become president of Columbia, Carl Sandburg, the poet and Lincoln's biographer, visited the Pentagon to see for himself what kind of man was this Eisenhower.

After the interview, Sandburg exclaimd: "Why, Columbia's getting the pick of them all. He's got what the greatest scholars of all time have had—wisdom and humanity."

LAYING OF CORNERSTONE OF PAN AMERICAN UNION ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

Pan American Union Hailed At Cornerstone Laying Here

Dr. Mauricio Nabuco, Brazilian Ambassador, yesterday called on representatives of the United States and Latin America to face the future with courage by remembering how much progress has been made toward uniting the Americas in the past.

The occasion was the laying of the cornerstone of the new Pan American Union building at 18th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

Recalling that 40 years ago, as a child, he was present when the cornerstone of the first Pan American Union was laid just across 18th st., Dr. Nabuco described the important part the organization has played in Western Hemisphere unity.

"By its own efforts, the Pan American Union is capable today of taking the burdens off Governments in numerous everyday problems . . . If we have faith and a spirit of idealism, no limit can be set to the services America and mankind will reap from this institution," he declared.

Paul C. Daniels, United States representative on the council of the Organization of American States, warned the group, that while new structures are being built, the old structures—the treaties and procedures to maintain peace—must not be neglected.

"In these troubled times, the American republics must stand together in defense of their common ideals, and not permit their occasional differences to threaten their very peace and security," he declared.

Following the speeches, a parchment scroll, bearing the signatures of representatives of the 21 nations who are members of the council of OAS, was placed in the cornerstone and cemented into the foundation wall. The honor of laying the cornerstone went to Dr. Juan Bautista de Lavalle of Peru, who is chairman of the council of OAS.

The 2-million-dollar structure is scheduled for completion in July, 1949.

Europe Union Held Far Off

It is impractical for anyone to expect a genuine federation of western European countries for generations to come, Robert Gordon Menzies, former Austtralian Prime MRinister, told members of the District Bar Association meeting at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

By what sort of reasoning, Menzies asked, "do people think that by writing on paper they can take France, Italy, Germany and the Low Countries and make a federated parliament in which each country would be outnumbered by the others and each abandon its sovereignty and traditions?"

The Australian cited the difficulties that beset the United States and Australia in forming a genuine federal union even though the barriers of different languages and traditions were nonexistent.

The speaker advocated encouragement of meetings between leaders of different states and the drawing up of treaties in any conceivable field for the purpose of providing a groundwork for realization of the future ideal of a western European federation.

Declaring that under its present constitution France must remain unstable, Menzies declared an unstable France means an uncertain Europe which in turn must lead to an unsettled world.

He blamed French instability on the fact that, under French law, unlike the British and Australian constitutions, when the French executive branch is challenged by the legislative arm, it cannot dissolve the parliament and go to the people for a vote of confidence.

Patel Urges Strong Army For India

New Delhi, Oct. 12 (AP).—Deputy Prime Minister Sardar V. Patel said tonight it is necessary for India to increase her armed might "in view of disturbed conditions in Southeast Asia."

He specifically named Burma, Malaya, and China.

Speaking at a Hindu festival, he said:

"If we are to follow Mahatma Gandhi, let us do so. But if we cannot, let us arm ourselves and be prepared. Let us not fall prey to the forces of disorder that are lapping at India's borders and disturbing some, though negligible, portions within."

Patel, strong man of the All-India Congress Party, asked Pakistan again to withdraw her troops from Kashmir.

Britain Studies Red Pressure in Asia

London, Oct. 12 (AP).—British Commonwealth chiefttains looked into the dangers of Communist pressure in Southeast Asia and the weakened condition of the Empire lifeline in the Middle East today.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin came back from the United Nations meeting in Paris and gave a "comprehensive review" of international matters before the Empire conference, said a communique tonight.

Malcolm MacDonald, commissioner general for Southeast Asia, outlined the situation in Malaya where marauders have been slaying white planters.

A future peace treaty with Japan also was discussed.

Sub Guinea Pig In Sinking, Now Is One in Raising

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 12 (AP).—A fromer German submarine was sunk in Chesapeake Bay September 29 in tests to determine the lethal range of depth charges, a naval spokesman disclosed today.

The submarine, the U-1105, was sun off Piney Point, Md.

The Navy now is testing new equipment and techniques for raising a sunken submarine, using the U-1105 as the guinea pig.

"Efforts now are under way to raise the vessel in order to evaluate the damage" from the explosives that sent her to the bottom, the spokesman reported.

"If the submarine can be salvaged," he added, "it will be used as a target for additional similar tests."

British Plane Crashes, Burns in the Sudan

London, Oct. 12 (AP).—Mercury Airways said one of its two-engined planes carrying 20 persons crashed and burned today about 300 miles from Khartoum, in the Sudan.

A spokesman said the pilot and a crew member were "badly burned" but that first reports indicated passengers were uninjured.

consul "just like anyone else." He said that ever since attending American-established Robert College in Istanbul, he had "dreamed" of seeing America.

Because his mother is still in Sofia, he said he feared to talk freely lest there be reprisals against her. His father, a wealthy tobacco merchant, vanished during the Red occupation of Bulgaria, he said.

Looking very much the part of the dashing dandy of the Balkan diplomatic set, Karaghiosov said he was vice consul at Istanbul for about 18 months, then was elevated to acting consul general about two years ago.

"The consul general was recalled, and never heard from since," he explained. "Probably in concentration camp, if he's alive."

He added, solemnly: "I dropped communicating with my friends in Bulgaria. It is not healthy for anyone there to communicate with the outside world."

His plans are to "rest and relax and visit my friends here," for the duration of his visa, he said. From that point on his plans are indefinite, he said.

The State Department refused to comment while the Bulgarian Legation and Turkish Embassy said they knew nothing about the refugee diplomat.

Act Doesn't Apply to Charter

Federal employes living in Montgomery County may work either for or against adoption of a proposed county charter without running afoul of the Hatch Act.

This interpretation of Civil Service Commission rulings was given last night by Gerald Morgan, counsel for the Montgomery charter committee, at a rally at the Chevy Chase Woman's Club.

The proposed charter will be voted on in a referendum November 2.

Morgan said, however, there remains some question as to whether Federal workers may actively work for election of candidates in a county election, but that the charterites are seeking clarification from the Civil Service Commission.

The charter question will appear on the extreme right side of the November 2 ballot, it was explained.

The charterites revealed plans to seek "qualified" candidates to run for the proposed seven-man county council if the charter is approved in the referendum.

Allen H. Gardner, chairman of the committee will "welcome suggestions for candidates" for the council.

Gardner said his committee "will be willing" to confer with other organizations and political parties on candidates and that "if one or the other political parties presents a slate that is up to our standards, it will be okay."

Approximately 100 persons attended the rally.

Dean J. Hayden spoke in place of Frederick Lee on the recent Maryland Court of Appeals ruling that will put the charter question on the November 2 ballot.

"The successful conclusion of this litigation should inspire every member of the charter committee and all those who approve the charter generally," he said.

Wallaceites Indorse Montgomery Charter

Indorsement of the proposed Montgomery County Charter by the Progressive Party was announced yesterday.

ended, the crowd remained in place while the academic procession filed past with Eisenhower now near the head. His wife had an aisle seat in the front row.

As he passed her, Eisenhower broke step, veered to his left, touched his wife's hand and whispered to her, then passed on. She smiled happily, then turned and spoke to her son, Capt. John Eisenhower, there with his wife.

Later when reporters asked the general's wife what her husband had said, she replied with a smile "that was private."

The weather brought a touch as warm as Eisenhower's.

The first time the sun broke through the clouds was at the moment Eisenhower received the charter and keys of the university from Dr. Frederick Coykendall, chairman of the university trustees.

The sun shone warm on the smiling new president as Dr. Coykendall told him, "may you long find satisfaction and success in the duties and honors of your high office." He then turned over to Eisenhower the president's chair, once the property of Benjamin Franklin.

In the half hour that Eisenhower spoke, the clouds drifted away until only a few were left in the bright blue sky.

"Today's challenge to freedom and to every free institution is such that none of us dares stand alone," Eisenhower declared. "For human freedom is today threatened by regimented statism. The threat is infinitely more specific than that involved in mere adherence to opposing ideologies."

The general declared that "democracy and the police state have no common purposes, methods or aspirations."

"In today's struggle, no free man, no free institution can be neutral. All must be joined on a common profession—that of democratic citizenship; every institution within our national structure must contribute to the advancement of this profession."

"Among us," Eisenhower said, "the soldier who becomes an educator or the teacher who becomes a soldier enters no foreign field, but finds himself instead engaged in a new phase of his fundamental life purpose—the protection and perpetuation of basic human freedoms."

Turning to things that threaten freedom, he said it was easy to see the dangers from without, and the menace of those who advocate destruction of freedom from within this country. He added:

"Less easy is it to see the dangers that arise from our own failure to analyze and understand the implications of various economic, social and political movements among ourselves.

"Thus one danger arises from too great a concentration of power in the hands of any individual or group; the power of concentrated finance, the power of selfish pressure groups, the power of any class organized in opposition to the whole—any of these, when allowed to dominate, is fully capable of destroying individual freedom as is power concentrated in the political head of a state."

At the same time he warned that a paternalistic government could, by subsidy, suffocate "the will of a people to maintain a high degree of individual responsibility."

"If we permit extremes of wealth for a few, enduring poverty for many, we shall create social explosiveness and a demand for revolutionary change," Eisenhower said. "If we do not eliminate selfish abuse of power by any one group, we can be certain that equally selfish retaliation by other groups will ensue."

General Eisenhower said all America's cherished rights and freedoms are mutually dependent for their existence.

"Thus, when shallow critics denounce the profit motive inherent in our system of free enterprise, they ignore the fact that it is an economic support of every human right we possess, and that without it all rights would soon disappear."

Turning to the role of the schools, he said it was "imperative" for every citizen to participate intelligently and effectively in democratic affairs. He said it was the principal purpose of education to "prepare the student for an effective personal and social life in a free society." He then outlined his ideas for "education in the obvious":

"Love of freedom, confidence in the efficacy of cooperative effort, optimism for the future, invincible conviction that the American way of life yields the greatest in human values—to help the student build these attitudes not out of indoctrination but out of genuine understanding, may seem to some to be education in the obvious.

"Of course, the reverse is true. There is a growing doubt among our people that democracy is able to cope with the social and economic trials that lie ahead. Among some is a stark fear that our way of life may succumb to the combined effects of creeping paralysis from within and aggressive assault from without.

"Fear of the future with a concomitant sense of insecurity and doubt of the validity of fundamental principles is a terrible development in American life—almost incredible in the immediate aftermath of America's most magnificent physical and spiritual triumphs. Only by education in the apparently obvious can doubt and fear be resolved.

"Here lies a heavy obligation on Columbia University and all her sister schools; unless such fear is banished from our thinking, the sequel will be either the heavy curse of tyrannical regimentation or the collapse of our democratic civilization in social anarchy."

Eisenhower said the liberal education called for study of both the triumphs and failures in application of democratic principles, guided by a clear underlying conviction "that the principles themselves have timeless validity."

He said there would be no "administrative suppression or distortion of any subject" at the university. In saying that the facts of communism would be taught, Eisenhower commented that "if we, as adults, attempt to hide from the young, the facts in this world struggle, not only will we be making a futile attempt to establish an intellectual 'iron curtain,' but we will arouse the lively suspicion that statism possesses virtues whose persuasive effect we desperately fear."

Hoover Warns U. S. Against Meddling

New York, Oct. 12 (NYHT.).—Former President Herbert Hoover warned tonight against Communist fifth column efforts to disrupt Western Hemisphere cooperation by exciting fear and ill will.

Hoover advised that the United States keep its hands off the internal politics of hemisphere neighbors. He outlined his own formula for strengthening the unity of the 21 New World nations, which he said together constitute a "great Gibraltar of human progress."

He declared that free exchange of capital and goods is needed to build up "the defense of this hemisphere against the threats of Russia."

Receives Foundation Award

Hoover spoke at the seventh anniversary dinner of the Americas Foundation, held in celebration of the 456th anniversary of the discovery of America. He received from the foundation its annual Americas Award for his "contribution to hemisphere amity and understanding."

The United States itself, by the very nature of its existence, is one of the forces in our hemisphere that make for ill will, Hoover explained.

"The 'colossus of the north,'" he said, "by its very predominant strength, excites fear from the timid and furnishes a torch to the malvolent. In days gone by, European nationals set the fires of ill-will for commercial reasons. Nowadays Communist fifth columnists in every country systematically and incessantly, by conspiracy and by subsidized press and radio, excite fear and ill-will against us."

Past Interference Cited

The United States, he added, has not been without fault. We interfered in the internal affairs of sovereign Latin American cuntries 30 years ago when we used troops to restore order; and again witin the past five years when "some officials from our State Department have regrettingly interfered in internal elections."

In the field of economic cooperation, Hoover said, "We need no Marshall Plan for the Americas. They are going concerns. We need methods to release the capital energies of the peoples."

Among thes methods he suggested: Assurances that the United States has no imperialistic designs; assurances from smaller countries to United States that the rules of commerce will not be changed in the middle of the game; a solution to the obstacle of "double, triple and even quadruple taxation on returns from enterprise."

Wedemeyer View

Army Seeks To Avoid, Not Prepare War

By the United Press

Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, Army general staff planning chief, said last night that Army expansion is designed to prevent war, not to get ready for war.

He spoke on a television broadcast of "We, the People," on the subject "How Near Is America to War?"

He did not answer the basic question of the video interview. But he did say the Army is working to prevent war by means of strengthening America's hand in its bid for peace and security.

There is no truth in criticism that the Army is dictating American foreign policy, he declared.

"Under our Constitution, the President and the State Department, as well as the Congress, are required to formulate national and international policies."

He said the proof of this could be found in how quickly a correction in foreign policy results when the people do not favor a particular policy adopted by the Administration.

He said the military's role is that of support of the Nation's policies here and overseas.

"Obviously," he added, "consultation must be held between military leaders and policy makers because we Americans must not take steps either at home or abroad that we are not capable of supporting with all our resources, including the military.

He cited the situation in Europe as an example. He said no one would question the "fact" that the great majority of Americans want our country to take a firm stand against world aggression by any power.

"Every step, every plan being made by the Army is simply in the direction of being prepared to carry out the wishes of our Government and the people," he asserted.

Gen. Finch Heads Air Force Group

The National Guard Bureau completed its reorganization yesterday with the appointment of Brig. Gen. George C. Finch of Atlanta, Ga., as chief of the Air Force division.

Finch, a veteran pilot, will continue to command the Fifty-fourth fighter wing, which includes units in seven Southern States.

Earlier yesterday, the National Guard announced appointment of Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, commanding general of the Thirty-ninth Infantry division of the Louisiana and Arkansas National Guard, to head the Army division.

Civilian Defense Program Drafted, Police Chiefs Told

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—A Government official said today a civilian defense program, including intensive planning for atomic war hazards, had been recommended to the United States Secretary of Defense.

Lieut. Col. Barnet W. Beers of the General Staff Corps, Office of Civil Defense Planning, told the annual conference of the International Association of Chiefs of Police that the proposed organization also could have peacetime use in natural disasters.

Beers said a national office with a "small but capable" staff was proposed to organize and train people in civil defense tasks. He added the organization would be expanded on a Nation-wide scale in a war emergency.

"TYPHOON" TURBINE ENGINE HAS BEEN ADDED TO FOUR-MOTORED B-17 FLYING LAB

New Bomber To Use Gas Turbine Motor

The Air Force permitted disclosure yesterday of a new gas turbine-propeller engine, the second of its type announced in this country. It was designed for use on a giant long range bomber, the Boeing B-52, which still is in the development stage.

The new engine is the T-35 Typhoon, built by the Wright Aeronautical Corporation at Woodridge, N. J., a division of Curtiss-Wright Corporation.

The Air Force withheld all details. It permitted announcement only that the engine has been undergoing flight tests for a year in the nose of a B-17 Flying Fortress, where it acts as a fifth engine.

The company said this test method greatly speeds up evaluation of the new power plant by enabling study of actual performance at high altitudes and speeds.

The only hint of the power of the T-35 was a statement that the power of the other four engines of the B-17 may be "adjusted at will" while the new engine is operating. This led to speculation that the T-35 alone will fly the airplane.

The only previous engine of this type formally announced was the General Electric T-31, which the Air Force installed in Consolidated Vultee XF-81 and the Navy installed in the Ryan XF2R, both fighters. All three projects now are dormant.

The T-35 engine is basically the same as turbo-jet engines used in jet fighters and bombers. However, instead of using the thrust of hot gases out of the tail pipe, the power is applied to a propeller shaft by directing the gases through a series of turbine wheels. The thrust then is obtained from the propeller. This method generally is regarded as more efficient for long range but not as effective in obtaining high speed.

Both the Air Force and the Navy recently announced new engine developments in which the exhaust gases of piston engines is used to operate turbines, thereby making more power available to the propeller shaft.

Berlin Orchestra Won't Play Under Red Auspices

Berlin, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Berlin Philharmonic has voted against playing under Communist auspices—at least until the Russians lift their Berlin blockade.

The vote backed up a ban previously placed by the American military government, under whose license the orchestra performs.

William T. Babcock, United States deputy military governor for Berlin, said the orchestra, which operates from the American zone, had been prohibited from broadcasting over the Soviet-controlled Radio Berlin or in the Russian zone.

The AMG official said Russian zone listeners are not being deprived of philharmonic music because the orchestra broadcasts regularly over RIAS—American-controlled radio station.

constant turmoil and economic chaos."

"Are we dreaming?" Austin demanded of the committee. "Can such tactics, such actions, such a record be those of one of the founders of the United Nations?"

With his voice shaking with anger at times, Austin charged that the Russians harped on the horrors of atomic warfare but disregarded "just plain war."

"Aggressive warfare, in the Soviet Socialist officialdom, has not yet fallen into disrepute," he said. "For the time being only atomic warfare is to be dreaded and avoided at all costs. Indeed, war itself is still a recognized means of achieving a Communist world society."

Of recent events in eastern Europe, he said:

"Is it really necessary to go into detail regarding the domination of Romania, Poland, Hungary, Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia? Recent events, in truly impressive details, have disclosed that the price of Soviet friendship is complete subservience to Soviet policy."

Austin said that only 5.9 per cent of the 1948-49 United States national income was being spent for military purposes, while according to British figures, Russia is spending 17 per cent.

Vishinsky in his reply gave these Russian percentages of military expenditures compared to national income: 32 for 1940, 52 for 1944, 23.9 for 1946, 18.4 for 1947, and 17.5 for 1948.

Flanders Sees Aid Shifting to Armament

By the United Press

Russia has won a major battle in the cold war by forcing the United States to shift the main weight of the Marshall Plan from European recovery to rearmament, Senator Ralph E. Flanders said yesterday.

The rearming and political unification of non-Communist western Europe, he said, are becoming the principal objectives of the multi-billion-dollar program which Congress launched only last spring to help speed European recovery.

The Vermont Republican told a news conference that "within the last 10 days" he had detected signs that the shift already is under way. He refused to elaborate, except to say that bumper harvests in Europe this year would permit a cut in American relief spending under the Marshall Plan.

Airlift Held Prestige Aid

Detroit, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Murray D. Van Wagoner, United States governor of the Bavarian zone of Germany, said tonight that communism has taken "the greatest licking of its life during the past year in Germany."

In a speech to the Detroit Council of the Knights of Columbus on its fiftieth anniversary celebration, the former Michigan Governor said the western powers' greatest triumph has been "the failure of the Communists to blockade Berlin."

"The airlift has been a great prestige builder for us," Van Wagoner said. "It indicates to all Europeans how far we intend to carry our struggle for that part of Europe which is still free."

Van Wagoner said the Russians are alarmed over the success of the airlift of food to Berlin and over German anti-Communist mass meetings.

Van Wagoner estimated that 650 Germans living in the Russian zone of Germany cross into Bavaria illegally every day, leaving behind all their possessions.

"The Germans want us to stay," he said. "They do not want a repetition of the Russian occupation they tasted in May and June of 1945.

mer of 1946, Soviet spokesmen denounced the idea as a violation of the Potsdam agreement.

The fact that Stalin now called it "progress" was regarded here and in London as an example of his tactics in negotiation, rather than as a sign of any change in the Soviet position.

What Stalin wanted above all on August 2 was to have the Western allies delay their plans for setting up a German state. He wanted this so insistently that he was willing to make conversational concessions on other aspects of the German problem.

The British official account of the Moscow and Berlin negotiations is almost identical with the American version issued by the State Department on September 26. The Stalin remark about "progress" in western Germany does not, however, appear in the American account.

Another remark of Stalin's, published by the British but omitted by the Americans, came from the record of the meeting on August 23, when the Western envoys saw him for the second time. On this occasion American Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith was insisting on absolute equality of control by the four powers over the Berlin currency.

The British White Paper paraphrases Stalin's answer to Smith as follows:

"Generalissimo Stalin replied that if German unity were restored by confirming the decisions of previous four-power conferences, Berlin would remain the capital of Germany, and then there would be no objection to the forces and authority of the Western powers remaining in Berlin and sharing control of the German government in Berlin with those of the Soviet Union.

"If this did not happen, then Berlin would lose its standing as capital of Germany. But even in this case, Generalissimo Stalin would not wish to oust the occupation forces of the Western governments from Berlin."

The meaning of this, as interpreted here, was that if the Western Allies postponed their western Germany political plans, well and good. If they didn't, their occupation troops could stay in Berlin, but only as guests of the Russians in a city that would be under Soviet control.

The British White Paper also contains the full text of the report by the three Western military governors on September 7, telling of their futile week of wrangles and disagreements with Soviet Marshal Vassili Sokolovsky in Berlin.

The generals reported to their governments that on September 7 Sokolovsky finally made concessions on road and rail traffic into Berlin which, "although they do not completely restore the position as it existed in March, are probably acceptable."

But Sokolovsky refused to budge on three other main issues—on the powers of the proposed financial commission to control the Berlin currency, on Soviet control of trade between Berlin and the rest of Germany, and above all on the Soviet demand for control of air traffic.

These were the rocks on which the discussions broke, with the result that the Western Allies finally took the Berlin blockade to the Security Council of the United Nations.

Most of the British White Paper consists of a long and detailed story of the ever-widening gap between Russia and the West over the control of Germany between 1945 and 1948. It tells of the divergent economic policies in the western and Soviet zones, the Soviet stripping of farms and factories in the Soviet zone, and the spectacle of Germany as "a cow fed from the west and milked from the east."

The American official report did not include this material, but officials here are compiling it and intend to issue it as a separate publication soon.

Racial Bias Topic in U. N.

Paris, Oct. 12 (AP).—Russia accused the United States, Britain and South Africa today of practicing "a shameful, dirty and unfair racial discrimination."

Soviet Delegate Alexei Pavlov made the charge during Social Committee debate of a draft declaration of human rights.

He also accused Cuba of seeking to water down an article pledging "equal protection of the law against any discrimination." He said a Cuban amendment would open the door to discrimination.

Pavlov spoke of "terrorizing the Negroes" in the South of the United States. He alleged oppression of Indian minorities in South Africa and "discrimination against natives" in British colonial territories.

He said women "suffer serious political handicaps" in the United States and Britain. He compared the number of women in Parliament of the two countries with Russia which he said has more feminine Parliamentarians than all other nations combined.

The committee approved Article 1 of the proposed declaration which states: "All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights. They are endowed with reason and conscience, and should act toward one another in a spirit of brotherhood."

Italian Reds Fight Neo-Fascist Chief

Rome, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Communist members of Parliament today ganged up on the leader of a small Neo-Fascist Party in a brawl which interrupted a session of the Chamber of Deputies for 20 minutes.

Ushers went to the aid of Giorgio Almirante, chief of the admittedl Fascist Italian Social Movement (MSI), as fist-swinging Communist deputies rushed him.

The brawl began when Communist Boss Palmiro Togliatti, speaking in the chamber for the first time since he was wounded in an assassination attempt last July, attacked the "Fascist tendencies" of Italy's anti-Communist government.

Togliatti, assailing government prosecution of Leftists guilty of political or personal murders during the bloody period of Italy's liberation, charged that "true Partisans . . . who fought for the liberation of their country are being arrested as assassins."

Almirante sprang to his feet when the Partisans were mentioned to shout:

"They are assassins!"

Communist deputies leaped from their seats and rushed the MSI leader. Ushers formed a protective wedge around him, but order was not restored for 20 minutes.

Graziani Tells Court Of His Jewish Descent

Rome, Oct. 12 (NYHT).—Former Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, who was Minister of Defense of Mussolini's last-ditch Republican Fascist government in north Italy, told an Italian tribunal here today that he is of Jewish descent.

Graziani

Graziani, who is charged with high treason, said it was impossible for him to be an anti-Semite.

"I am a descendant of a certain Baruch of the twelfth century who was a Jewish banker who served the Vatican," the former marshal said. "I have always protected the Jews."

Graziani flatly denied many charges of atrocious treatment of African natives. He said he was popular with the natives and suggested they would welcome him back.

Chinese Take Red Changwu

Nanking, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Government announced today its second major victory in Manchuria in two days—capture of the Communist field base of Changwu, 60 miles northwest of Mukden.

If confirmed, this would be a serious blow to the Communists. Changwu is a control point on the railway from North Manchuria and Harbin, over which the Reds move troops and supplies.

The government reported yesterday it had recaptured the south Manchurian port of Yingkow and established land communications with Mukden to the north.

Press dispatches, however, indicated fresh trouble for the government in east China, where the Reds were reported attacking the outer defense base of Suchow.

42 P-47 Fighters Bought by China For War on Reds

China bought 42 P-47 Thunderbolt fighter planes from the United States in August to aid in her war against the Chinese Communists, the State Department revealed yesterday.

The Chiang Kai-shek government paid $544,500 for the fully equipped planes. The money came out of the 88 million dollars this country advanced China to buy military equipment under legislation passed by the Eighteenth Congress.

Original cost of the P-47's, which were one of the Army's leading fighter escort planes during World War II, was $6,780,000. The Air Force now is replacing that type of plane with jet-propelled fighters.

China also bought 255 engines for C-46 and C-47 cargo planes in August for $393,500—10 per cent of their original cost. And she purchased $891,322 worth of other airplane parts and equipment.

U. S. to Increase Marine Guard in Jerusalem

The Marine guard at the United States Consulate-General in Jerusalem is being increased to full rifle platoon strength of 42 enlisted men and one officer, the Navy announced last night. It has maintained a 13-man Marine squad there since July to guard United States property and personnel.

The State Department requested the increase and Secretary of Defense James Forrestal approved it.

East European Union Reported Under Way

Prague, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—An "eastern union" to counter-balance the five-nation western European union will be foormed in the near future, reliable sources said today.

These sources said the establishment of a federation of the "peoples democracies" will be announced soon.

The federation is expected to be based largely on economic cooperation, probably starting off with a customs union and coordination of all the eastern states' long-range economic plans.

It is expected the new grouping will follow the pattern of the Benelux (Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg) customs union.

Plans for the federation reportedly were arranged at a September conference in the Crimea.

Reliable sources said the federation will include Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania. Its planners are hoping to exert enough pressure on Marshal Tito to bring in Yugoslavia, too, these sources said.

The Russian occupation zone in Austria also is reported to be under consideration for membership in the new grouping.

At the Crimea meeting, Premier Stalin and Foreign Minister Molotov are believed to have conducted the sessions in person.

Java Republicans Arrest Top Communist

Batavia, Java, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Republicans have seized one of two top Communist leaders of the Indonesian rebellion, Radio Jogjakarta said today.

The broadcast said Moscow-trained Alimin was arrested aboard a train in East Java while traveling disguised as a farmer.

Dennis Conviction Upheld by Court

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The conviction of Eugene Dennis, secretary of the Communist Party, if America, for contempt of Congress was upheld yesterday by the United States Court of Appeals here.

The court ruled unanimously against Dennis. Sentenced to serve a year in jail and pay a $1000 fine for the contempt, Dennis is free under $10,000 bond pending appeal moves.

The Appeals Court opinion, written by Judge Bennett Champ Clark, a former Congressman, was scathing. It called contentions of Dennis' lawyers "fanciful," "preposterous," "fantastic," and "sheer nonsense." A missive Dennis sent to Congress was termed "scurrilous and scandalous."

Disobedience Found

Dennis, the court found, willfully disobeyed a subpena calling on him to testify before the House Committee on Un-American Activities on April 9, 1947.

According to Dennis, he learned about a committee probe into communism through the newspapers and made a formal demand on the committee to testify. When he appeared, he proved a recalcitrant witness. The court said:

"Being asked by the committee for the usual identification, he refused to answer some of the questions going merely to the question of his identification. He refused to answer questions as to the name under which he was born. At this point a committee subpena was directed to be served on Dennis.

"Thereupon, apparently suddenly smitten with the delusion that by some marvelous transition he had been appointed to be the spokesman of all the American people, Dennis arose and shouted: 'In the name of the American people I hold this committee in contempt.'"

Subpena Is Served

It was at this point that the subpena was handed to Dennis. But, argued Dennis, he was immune from service while in the committeeroom. Of this, the court said:

"To urge that a person who voluntarily appears before a congressional committee and is not only in the jurisdiction but the actual presence of the committee is exempt from subpena by the committee itself is preposterous."

The prosecution did not need to prove that Dennis had a bad motive. It was only necessary to prove that Dennis meant to avoid testifying, and this was proved, the court said.

Dennis argued that the District of Columbia was not a fair place to try him and that Government employes should be excluded from the jury.

"Jury service is not only a duty of citizenship; it is a right as well. Blanket disqualification for jury service would operate as a bill of attainder on the many hundreds of thousands of Federal employes throughout the Nation," said the court.

In New York, Dennis said he would appeal the decision to the Supreme Court.

42 Arrested in Smuggling of Jamaicans Into U. S.; $350 Fees Alleged

Miami, Fla., Oct. 12 (AP).—Forty-two persons have been taken into custody in a drive against the smuggling of Jamaicans into this country through the use of false birth certificates, the Immigration Service announced today.

[The United Press said that arrival of three persons with South Carolina birth certificates but without "a Southern drawl" caused the first arrests.—Editor's note.]

Walter S. Miller, district director of immigration, said the Jamaicans were charged as high as $350 each for the certificates.

The arrests included 30 persons held in New York and 12 in Florida.

Miller identified Edward Emmanuel Stewart, 32-year-old real estate salesman of Mount Vernon, N. Y., as the alleged leader of the scheme.

The immigration chief said Stewart acknowledged that he "worked alone" in providing fraudulent certificates for "at least 60 to 100" Jamaicans. The certificates, Miller added, came from various South Carolina sources.

Miller quoted Stewart as saying the certificates brought from $50 to $350, and that he sometimes took credit.

Stewart was arrested at Miami International Airport September 27 after immigration inspectors noted an unusual number of Jamaicans entering the country with South Carolina birth certificates.

U. S. Orders Deportation Of CIO's Santo

John Santo, Romanian-born organizer for the CIO Transport Workers Union, has been ordered deported, the Immigration Service announced yesterday.

Santo

The service said Santo has committed three violations of the immigration laws: He entered the United States in 1927 as a student, but failed to maintain his exempt alien status as a student; he joined the Communist Party after coming here, and he became affiliated with an organization (the Communist Party) which advocated overthrow of the United States Government.

Hearings in his case were held a year ago before Immigration Commissioner Arthur Phelan of San Francisco. He lost an appeal to the immigration commissioner. He still can appeal to Attorney General Clark and the Federal Courts.

Santo, in New York, said he will immediately appeal the deportation order. He termed the deportation case "a frame-up based upon the testimony of stool pigeon witnesses who are unworthy of belief."

Michael J. Quill, international president of the TWU, said in a statement that Santo's deportation "will serve only to give aid and comfort to the Fascists, Ku Kluxers and other disruptive elements in our country."

Colorado Red Leader Sentenced to Jail

Denver, Oct. 12 (AP).—District Judge J. Foster Symes today sentenced Arthur Bary, self-identified Communist Party chairman in Colorado, to an indeterminate jail term for refusing to answer a federal grand jury's questions.

Symes ordered the Communist to jail "until he purges himself of contempt" by answering queries from the jury investigating Communist activities.

Ship Strike Cuts Guam Food Supply

Guam, Oct. 12 (AP).—The effects of the West Coast maritime strike were felt on this Pacific naval base island today.

Rear Adm. Charles A. Pownall, governor of Guam, authorized licensed wholesalers here to buy food supplies from the navy supply center for resale to civilians in the Guam establishment.

Wholesalers faced a serious food shortage. The order will be effective until 30 days after the strike ends.

AFL Workers Rout CIO Longshore Pickets

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 12 (AP).—AFL longshoremen drove CIO longshore pickets from two docks today and resumed unloading of two ships.

The outnumbered Congress of Industrial Organizations pickets did not resist, and there was no violence, but plenty of angry words.

CIO Official Empowered To 'Underwrite' Contract

San Francisco, Oct. 12 (AP).—A top CIO national official said today he has been given authority by national CIO President Philip Murray to 'underwrite" a contract between striking Pacific Coast longshoremen and their employers.

Allan S. Haywood, national CIO director, told the Call Bulletin Murray is willing to guarantee observance of such a contract. The employers have demanded the signing of non-Communist affidavits by union leaders and a contract observance guarantee before they will negotiate on the union's demand for a 15-cent pay increase to $1.82 per hour.

Meanwhile, as the strike became six weeks old today, there were these developments:

1. Haywood and his assistant, R. J. Thomas, had an hour-long talk with George Killion, president of the American President Lines. The union leaders said the talk was productive.

2. The El Dorado Oil Works, of Oakland, successfully went to court to free $150,000 worth of coconut fibre on a Swedish motorship.

3. Employers said they had not formally received a union proposal that a "rank and file" negotiating committee which would not include CIO leader Harry Brdiges be elected to make a long term contract with the employers. An employer spokesman said:

"No matter how thin you slice it, it's still Bridges. That's the answer to that one."

No Meetings Set

Talks Cease On Recording Music Ban

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—Hopes for an early end to the recording ban faded today as James C. Petrillo and industry officials broke off negotiations started a week ago.

A joint statement by the American Federation of Musicians president and record company representatives said, "no further meetings have been scheduled."

Thus the ban on new recordings by members of the AFL-Musicians Union that began December 31 will continue until one side or the other gives ground, or somebody comes up with a compromise acceptable to both.

The union stopped making recordings with the expiration of its old contract that provided royalties on records paid into its welfare fund and used to hire jobless musicians to give free concerts. The Taft-Hartley law prohibited a new agreement under which royalties would go to a fund controlled solely by the union.

Petrillo's Proposal

The basis for the present negotiations was a proposal by Petrillo for payment of royalties into a welfare fund to be administered by an impartial trustee. But spending of the funds still would be subject to conditions set by the union.

Neither side would disclose details of the discussions or the points of disagreement. It was understood, however, there were three major points at issue:

1. The scale to be paid to musicians making recordings.

2. Petrillo's claim that the union was entitled to back royalties on all records sold since December 31 that were made from master records recorded under terms of the old contract.

3. The legality of Petrillo's new royalty plan under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Union members, meanwhile, are cut off from revenue from recordings and the union from royalties. Musicians are much less in demand than during the union's wartime ban that lasted 27 months. Some musicians are reported in trade circles to be restive over the situation and in some cases to be making records under assumed names.

stead of the present plan of 8 for $1.

The 7.5-cent tokens, a company spokesman said, will be used in both intrastate and interstate traffic. Under the new intrastate rates, which also become effective Friday, the old 5-cent fare becomes 7.5 cents. And for a 12.5 cents ride, a passenger can deposit one token and a 5-cent piece.

The AB&W, which has about 70,000 daily riders, said higher operating costs made increases necessary and that the comany lost $44,417 during the first quarter of 1948. At the time it petitioned for the higher fares, the company estimated that if they were granted, the company could realize a net annual profit of about $95,000.

The bus line serves all of Alexandria, the southern portion of Arlington County and a small section of Fairfax County.

Bolton Held In Reuther Shooting

Detroit, Oct. 12 (AP).—Carl Bolton's examination on a charge of trying to kill Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO United Auto Workers, today was set for October 19.

Bolton

The 39-year-old Bolton, a former minor official in the one-million-man union, was held under $75,000 bond.

He stood mute before Judge Christopher E. Stein, who sent him to prison once before at the age of 19 for armed robbery. The court entered a plea of innocent for him.

Bolton, if convicted, would face a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Reuther, 40 years old, was shot in his home April 20. His assailant fired a shotgun through a window from the darkness. No motive ever was made public.

The red-haired union leader has resumed his duties, but his right arm, which was nearly blown off by the blast, still is being treated.

Prosecutor James N. McNally told Judge Stein that he was "not as yet" prepared to produce two unidentified individuals named in the warrant with Bolton. It charges assault with intent to kill.

Bolton was to be returned to Pontiac, Mich., to face a burglary charge in connection with the robbery of a CIO cooperative store there last February 28. It was while he was being held on this charge that State police claimed to have obtained evidence connecting him with the Reuther case.

Bolton, slim and on the dapper side, has denied any knowledge of the Reuther shooting.

Phone Unions, Firm Confer

Representatives of major telephone unions and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. met yesterday in negotiations, but no progress was reported.

Representatives of Divisions 36 and 50, Communications Workers of America (Ind.) held separate conferences with company officials at Hotel Washington.

Mrs. Mary Gannon, president of Division 50, which covers some 3000 area operators, announced following a two-hour conference that she had told the company its offer was "unsatisfactory." It would give her workers increases up to $3.

Glenn Watts, president of Division 36, covering plant, accounting and commercial employes, said:

"We met with the company all day but we weren't able to move them away from their offer of yesterday. We've told them we don't like it."

Lewis Before UMW Contradicts Dewey on Taft-Hartley Act

Cincinnati, Oct. 12 (AP).—John L. Lewis closed the United Mine Workers' convention today with a crack at Republican Thomas E. Dewey for defending the Taft-Hartley Act.

Lewis referred to Dewey as "some politician" who had spoken recently in favor of the Labor-Management Relations Act. The remark jolted many of the 3000 delegates, who had listened for more than a week to speeches attacking Dewey's Democratic opponent—President Truman.

There was laughter and a round of applause when Lewis said of Dewey:

"That man never read the act."

The Republican presidential candidate last night at Pittsburgh said the act deserved labor's right to band together.

"The act does just the reverse," said Lewis. "If he will take a printed copy of the statute as printed in committee form by the Government Printing Office and read it, he will find one line in the preamble which says labor has the right to organize."

Lewis previously had told the miners that Mr. Truman, who twice prosecuted Lewis and the miners in coal strikes, was an enemy of the union.

Lewis, whose salary was boosted to $50,000 a year at this convention, also was given a pen set and a gold watch by two locals today. The next scheduled convention will be in 1952 when Lewis will be 72 years old.

Final act of the nine-day session was adoption of a 10-point contract policy for next spring's negotiations. The objectives are the same general demands which Lewis has handed coal operators over the past three years. They will be implemented or made specific by the 200-man policy committee as contract talks near.

Demands include improvement in the 20-cents a ton royalty which finances the welfare and pension fund for miners over 62 years old, along with a shorter work week and higher pay.

The basic day rate for bituminous miners is $14.05.

Here are the general contract proposals:

"Further improvements in the UMW welfare and retirement fund; free explosives and blasting equipment; improved safety conditions and free safety equipment; adjustment of vacation, holiday, and severance compensation; improvement and compliance with mining, workmen's compensation and occupational disease laws.

In schools all over the South "our most valuable raw material" is being tempered and worked into strong, courageous stuff.

We cannot look into the bright, eager faces of these youngsters without seeing great things . . . industries as yet unbuilt . . . frontiers of science as yet unexplored . . . better ways of living and working together as yet untried.

We see, too, the trained minds and capable hands of those who some day will guide and operate the Southern Railway System that "serves the South." And we are grateful for the privilege of sharing in their education, through the taxes we pay in every community.

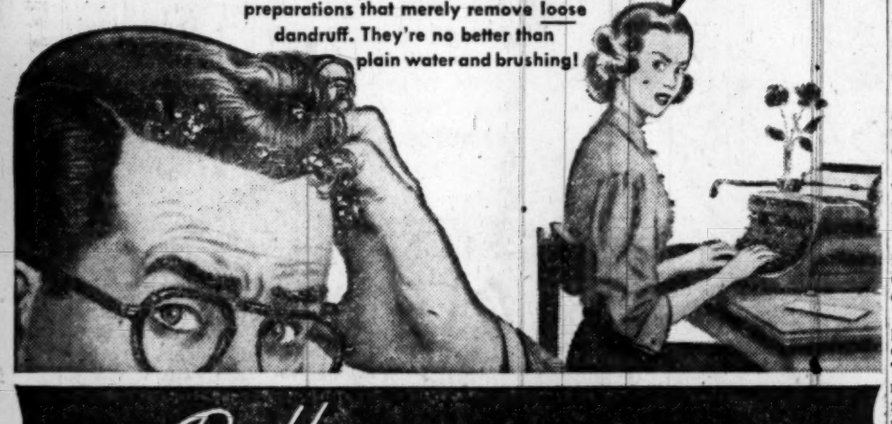
I HATE DANDRUFF!

You can't combat it effectively with ordinary preparations that merely remove loose dandruff. They're no better than plain water and brushing!



Double DANDERINE GUARANTEES DANDRUFF RELIEF

Kills dandruff-causing germ—on contact!*

Contains ingredient used by many hospitals. Provides amazing relief, even in some of the most severe cases.

Is dandruff making your hair unattractive? Is it marring your whole appearance, hurting your popularity? Many men and women who know all too well what a heavy handicap it is have found that Double Danderine gives them the real relief they've been seeking for years.

Leading authorities reveal that the most common kind of dandruff is caused by a germ. To get effective relief, this germ must be destroyed. Ordinary preparations that simply remove loose dandruff are ineffective because they don't destroy it. But Double Danderine does. It actually kills this germ on contact!

That's why we say Double Danderine guarantees dandruff relief. Try it. If you're not completely satisfied, return the empty bottle and your money will be refunded.

Ask for Double Danderine. Remember—it's not a shampoo, not a general antiseptic, but a special dandruff preparation that actually works!

*Pityrosporum Ovale, the germ which leading authorities say is the cause of the most common kind of dandruff.

Bumper Crop to Cut Grain Support Price

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

America's huge grain crop will boomerang on American farmers who raised it by reducing grain support prices next year, State and Federal agriculture officials were told yesterday.

The farm officials are meeting at the Agriculture Department for the annual Agricultural Outlook Conference.

Robert E. Post, department wheat expert, predicted price supports for wheat will be from 5 to 10 cents a bushel lower next year.

That is because farmers are paying less for feed, due to the large crops of feed grains such as corn, oats and soybeans.

Parity is the price fixed for farm products based on the price farmers must pay for goods they buy. Thus when prices that farmers must pay other farmers for feed for livestock go down the parity price of grain is reduced. Support prices are based on the parity price.

The recent inter-Cabinet row between Commerce Secretary Sawyer and Agriculture Secretary Brannan over grain exports this year was revived at the Outlook Conference.

Sawyer, Brannan and Secretary of State Marshall are members of the Cabinet food committee which decides on food exports. Sawyer has insisted that exports of wheat this year be cut to 400 million bushels. Last year wheat exports were 480 million bushels. Sawyer wants to hold the wheat in this country to reduce prices here, although wheat prices already are near the price support level.

Gives Export Estimate

O. N. Wells, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, told the conference that wheat supplies this year would justify exports of 525 million bushels. Wheat exports have no material effect on the cost of living, he said.

Monday, Dr. Dennis A. FitzGerald, food chief of the Economic Cooperation Administration, said foreign demand for American grain would continue for another year if European countries could get the scarce American dollars to buy it with.

Hugh L. Stewart of BAE yesterday predicted grain exports would drop to 150 million bushels by the 1951-1954 period. He said that 60 million acres in wheat would supply all demands then. This year, farmers will plant about 79 million acres, Post reported—about 9 per cent more than the Government set as a goal.

Utility Workers' Directors Vote To Back Truman

The board of directors of the Utility Workers Union (CIO) yesterday voted unanimously to indorse President Truman.

William J. Pachler, secretary-treasurer, announced after a meeting in Hotel Washington that the board would urge members to follow suit. Some 450 delegates will meet here beginning Friday for a three-day convention.

They're still switching, because Calvert makes any drink mellower!
Switch to Calvert Continues
Thousands are switching to Calvert Reserve because Calvert is milder!
Better Tasting Highball
Thousands have switched to Calvert because Calvert tastes better!

Smoother, much smoother!
Reason . . . Calvert is vacuum distilled by a patented low temperature process. Heat that "breaks down" and scorches the mash is avoided. Distilling gently at practically room temperature is a modern scientific miracle that helps make Calvert smoother.

Mellower, to be sure!
Because . . . Calvert whiskies are produced by exclusive, modern methods. Calvert's continuous pressure cooking, for instance, means constant control over the mash, less exposure to heat . . . another reason for Calvert's unmatched uniformity, mellowness.

Milder, yes! Here's why:
Because . . . Calvert whiskies are distilled especially for blending . . . and Calvert's blending experience is the greatest in the industry. Calvert maintains an unequalled "library" of over 200 fine blending whiskies and spirits for blending purposes.

Tastes better, naturally!
Because . . . from grain to bottling . . . Calvert quality is safeguarded by advanced scientific controls. Too, Calvert is taste-tested by a "Consumer Jury" of folks like you . . . to make sure it's the whiskey most palatable to the most people.

No wonder . . . every day, from coast-to-coast, more folks are Switching to Calvert!

Port Of Benedict

Senator Millard Tydings, who is one of the principal supporters of the proposal to bring oceangoing vessels up the Patuxent River to Benedict, Md., always has been one to foresee the commercial future of small towns that lack only access to the sea to achieve industrial greatness. Those who are familiar with some of his great forensic triumphs, achieved in the course of the discussion of appropriation bills, will not be surprised by his aspirations for the now tiny village of Benedict. They will remember, for instance, that stirring and imaginative speech he made on August 23, 1935. Standing on the floor of the Senate, he portrayed for his colleagues the future of Council Grove, Kans., to be made secure by a $150,000 rivers and harbors appropriation. The Senator said:

> That great metropolis of Council Grove, bursting with its millions of people, and these great ocean liners going up there laden down to the gunwales with freight from all four corners of the earth. I can see now the miles of docks along the water front in Council Grove, Kans., the busy steamships occupying the slips with their gigantic funnels sending smoke into the air, while down 100 railroad spurs there comes freight train after freight train.

The Senator was opposed to the appropriation for Council Grove and there was a suspicion at the time that he spoke in a satirical vein. It must not have been so. The Senator must have been in dead earnest. And being in dead earnest then about Council Grove, it clearly is incumbent upon him now, 15 years later, confronted with a similar opportunity, to imagine an ocean-port grandeur for Benedict no less than the metropolitan splendor he envisioned for Council Grove.

May both of his rosy dreams mature. It is to be hoped that the Senator frequently will be seen among the happy throngs tripping down the Queen Mary's gangplank as she ties up at both Council Grove and Benedict.

Wings Of Mercy

For about two weeks a program of evacuating Berliners on returning airlift planes has been going on secretly, it is now disclosed. But do not jump to the conclusion that this proves the military authorities think an outbreak of war is imminent. The explanation is much simpler and warmer. The passengers, now going at the rate of 80 a day, are children. Under sponsorship of the Berlin Social Welfare Department, youngsters of delicate health are being taken to stay the winter with friends and relatives in the western zones. Some thousand have already made the trip, and it is hoped that a number of aged and invalids can also be brought out.

The capacity of the airlift to carry the supply load into Berlin through the winter months is a moot question, of course, despite official confidence. A great deal depends on weather conditions, over which General Clay has no authority. But even complete success of the winter airlift will not mean comfortable living in the western sectors of Berlin. Food and fuel may be adequate, but they will not be abundant, and the rigors of the Berlin climate will fall most sharply on those least able to resist. The evacuation of a few thousand individuals will not, perhaps, appreciably increase the rations of those who are left. But it will help assure that sickness and physical helplessness will not become servants of the Soviet campaign of starvation.

Helping Wallace

Two incidents in the news afford examples of the way in which law enforcement officials sometimes contribute to the martyrdom which Henry Wallace and his associates are energetically seeking. In Washington, police raided a racially mixed dance sponsored by Wallace supporters and arrested seven persons for illegal sale of whisky and operating a lottery. In Chicago, police arrested the Progressive candidate for Senator and his campaign manager for holding a public meeting on a street corner without a permit. Regardless of the legalities, these actions will seem to many persons, especially Wallace supporters, to be aimed at hushing up the Wallace movement.

Judging from past performances, there can be no doubt that some members of the Wallace party deliberately invite repression by police. Merely because this is so is no reason for police to bend over backward and condone activities that patently violate the law. On the other hand, Wallaceites ought not to be singled out for discriminatory treatment not applied to the general public. Despite the explanation of Washington police that there was no political significance to Saturday night's raid, local authorities have shown enough indifference to rowdyism launched against the Wallaceites to arouse the suspicion that the arrests at this meeting were not entirely accidental. The case is at best a flimsy one, and, as police well know, illegal sale of liquor in Washington is by no means confined to Wallace rallies. The law should be enforced equitably against all violators.

New French Crisis

M. Benoit Franchon, secretary of the French Confederation of Labor, has coolly acknowledged the truth of Premier Queuille's assertion that the latest series of strikes throughout France amounts in effect to an insurrection against the government. The purpose of the strikes, said M. Franchon, is to bring about the dissolution of the military agreement concluded recently among the west European states and to force "a government of democratic union based on the working class."

But what makes the situation critical for the regime is not so much the fact that the strikes are being directed by Communists for purely political purposes determined at Moscow as that the Government has been utterly unable to redress the real grievances of the workers. Their hardships have naturally increased as the inflation has accelerated, and it is difficult to persuade them that further wage increases must in the end aggravate their sufferings. Nevertheless, the non-Communist unions, Socialist and Catholic, appear to have recognized that they have nothing to gain by helping the Reds to complete the ruin of the French economy and of whatever hopes these workers may have placed in the ultimate success of the Marshall Plan.

Whether the Queuille government can weather the crisis, which is now in its second week and has already resulted in incalculable damage to the still disordered and enfeebled French productive system, seems more than doubtful, since its position was highly precarious at best—though there is some indication of a revolt against Communist domination in certain of the unions. No doubt General de Gaulle, if he chose, could save the government for the time being, by directing his followers in the Assembly to support it throughout the crisis, but he has shown no disposition to do so. It is evidently M. de Gaulle's conviction that things in France must go from bad to worse before they can improve. That is to say he considers improvement impossible until there is a radical change in the French political structure.

M. de Gaulle appears to be hoping that the crisis may sweep him into power, upon terms that will permit the question of his Fifth Republic to be referred immediately to the people in a general election. Meanwhile, the Communists are hoping to force the formation of a new cabinet in which they would be included. This, of course, would be a disastrous blow to the Western Union. Thus, if it really comes to a choice of evils, M. de Gaulle would certainly seem the lesser of them.

Dewey's Labor Policy

Governor Dewey's long-awaited address on labor did not answer all the questions that have been asked as to where he stands, but it did much to clarify his basic attitude. The Governor refused to consider labor apart from other groups that make up our national commonwealth. The problems of the worker have not been solved and are not going to be solved, he said, by separating labor from the rest of the country. Labor is an integral part of our whole economy, and it cannot possibly prosper unless there is prosperity for other groups as well. All the points in Mr. Dewey's labor program stem from this important fact.

It naturally follows that Mr. Dewey sympathizes with the efforts of the last Congress to amend the one-sided Wagner Act. That legislation penalized unfair labor practices by employers without any comparable restraints upon organized labor. The result was to put a premium upon arbitrary union conduct. The Taft-Hartley Act was passed to redress the balance. Mr. Dewey thinks, along with most of those who have closely studied the act, that it falls substantially short of perfection. He promises to work for whatever changes experience may prove to be desirable, which stands out in sharp contrast to President Truman's demand for its repeal.

This is a well-reasoned attitude toward the law, particularly in view of the favorable results to which it has already contributed. Certainly there has been no wholesale firing of union men and no loss of liberty on the part of individual workers, as the foes of the measure predicted. But during the year since the act became effective, Mr. Dewey says, strikes have been reduced by almost one half. No doubt this is due in part to the subsidence of the postwar ferment and the realization of union men that wage boosts which are certain to be followed by rising prices may not be worth several weeks or months of idleness. The improvement is nonetheless impressive. It suggests that a great many wage earners may see in the Taft-Hartley Act's restraints upon the more unwarranted types of strikes a blessing in disguise.

Mr. Dewey's promises to labor include a higher minimum wage, extension of social security, a rehabilitated Labor Department and mediation service, protection of collective bargaining, vigorous action against monopolies, better housing, an attack on soaring prices, "freedom and equality" in race relations, protection of civil liberties and exposure of Communists. This is a rather large dose of generalities and of course many of these objectives parallel or overlap those of the Truman Administration. One can only hope that Mr. Dewey will find time to discuss them in more detail and with the same degree of balanced judgment that he gave to the Taft-Hartley Act.

Chief Justice

The unfortunate effects of the abortive mission to Moscow on our national relations have loomed so large that scarcely a word has been said about the potential effects upon the Supreme Court. It would be no minor disruption of the work of the court to summon its presiding officer for such an assignment. And failure of such a mission headed by the Chief Justice would certainly reflect upon the prestige of the court.

It is said that the late Chief Justice Hughes, when his advice was asked as to a problem in international relations, replied that he could not respond without studying the State Department's documents bearing upon the problem for the previous six months. Surely no less a preparation would have been necessary for the mission to Moscow which the President planned for Chief Justice Vinson. Even with such preparation, Mr. Vinson would doubtless have been under a severe handicap in the Russian capital. Under the Soviet system, the Chief Justiceship is an insignificant office. The man who holds the second highest post among United States officialdom might have found himself dealing with subordinates if the fantastic scheme had been carried through. In any event, such a mission, which could have carried only the umbrella of appeasement, could not have been successful in the context of the American policy which is being followed in Paris. The result would have been a reflection upon the Supreme Court no less than upon the Administration sponsoring the venture.

Several Presidents have made a practice of drafting members of the Supreme Court for nonjudicial assignments. Back in 1911 Mr. Taft induced Justice Hughes, against his will and better judgment, to serve on a commission investigating second-class mail rates. During World War II Justice Byrnes was drafted to head the Economic Stabilization Administration, with the offer that his position on the bench would be held open—an offer properly rejected by him. Justice Roberts' participation in the Pearl Harbor inquiry undoubtedly interfered with his work on the court, although the need for judicial talent in that instance may well be regarded as imperative. Chief Justice Stone properly resisted the efforts of President Roosevelt to make him head of the wartime Rubber Commission. A similar attitude on the part of Chief Justice Vinson, if he was actually approached in regard to the proposed mission to Moscow, would have saved President Truman and the entire Nation from embarrassment.

Except under the gravest sort of emergency, when only a member of the Supreme Court can perform the mission in question, we think it is very bad policy to take judges off the high bench for any administrative task. That is particularly true with respect to the Chief Justice. His voice is authoritative and his influence is great only in the judicial realm where his regular work is done. The precedent set by Chief Justice Stone and many of his predecessors is one that ought to be revived for the sake of the court and the country.

That Solitary "No"

For the rugged individualist of 1948 we nominate the delegate at the United Mine Workers Convention who dared to raise his hand against a 100 per cent salary boost for John L. Lewis. This defiance must have required courage almost on a par with that which has led other men to vote "no" in a Russian election or to answer an Army sergeant's call for volunteers. But the gesture was futile. Nearly 3000 delegates roared out their devotion to Mr. Lewis and took an almost personal pride in making him the first union leader to receive $50,000 a year. Indeed, one delegate with a nice sense of propriety wanted to raise him to $75,000 so that he would have an income equal to that of the man who tried to put him in jail. Mr. Lewis reciprocated with becoming modesty when he vetoed another proposal to give him life tenure.

There was, to be sure, a little more protest over the proposal to double monthly dues and raise the initiation fee from $10 to $50, but even these went through like a UMW strike vote. Cynics may point out that this action removes any lingering doubt that unions are big business and that it demonstrates the old adage that success brings its own reward, or, put another way, "them that has gits." But it is reasonable to suppose that inflation has hit the UMW just as it has sometimes affected the ego of the UMW chief. We always like to see a man get ahead and, considering Mr. Lewis' well-demonstrated nuisance value, we dare say he is worth every penny bestowed on him.

THE COCK CROWS TWICE

Simon Peter
Wept bitter tears.
The crow of the cock
Was piercing his ears.

The cock crowed, too,
When night was high,
But Simon Peter
Heard not the cry.

Heard not the cry
Till the morning was late
When he sat by the fire
There at the gate.

Sat by the blue-fire
His back to the flame,
Told the servants
He knew not His Name

Peter, Peter,
Who denied Him thrice,
Grant us tears,
For the cock crows twice.

Greenbelt Feud

The Washington Post's story of October 7 by Walter T. Pulliam accurately portrays the attitude of Public Housing Administration toward its tenants, the residents of Greenbelt.

Robert A. Marshall's statement that PHA would "like to accomodate," but that PHA's hands are tied by the Supreme Court decision outlawing Government aid to religion, is deliberately misleading.

Greenbelt churches have asked for no "aid." In a business-like manner, they asked PHA to sell them land on which to put church buildings. They asked this, with the knowledge that this had been done at Greenbelt's "sister" towns of Greendale, Wis., and Green Hills, Ohio.

PHA proposes to put the entire town "on the block" when it sells, although there is no law demanding this. Who's tying PHA's hands?

The Greenbelt Mutual Home Ownership Corp., composed of most of Greenbelt's families, has been attempting for over two years to negotiate with PHA for the purchase of Greenbelt by and for the residents. "Impossible," says PHA. The churches have been attempting the same sort of negotiations. "Impossible," says PHA.

Now PHA is raising Greenbelt rents, to insure a high bid from an investor when Greenbelt is sold, with the result that purchase by the residents for their own use will surely be "impossible."

Chest Kickoff

Our Community Chest is in poor hands if the philosophy of G. Howland Shaw, as expressed at the kickoff luncheon, is to be followed.

When we have to dip into international politics for reasons for Christian charity; when we have to drag up the threadbare Red scare to inspire altruism; when we have to base friendship for our unfortunate on the striped-pants theories of the State Department, then we are bankrupt of the religion that tells us to do good to others.

Shaw and Morgan Beatty show themselves to be copy cats of so many in our public life who lift up the unpopular Communist threat to hide their own proverty of ideas. Beatty surprises me, Shaw not so much.

My contribution to the Community Chest will be given because I believe in the Golden Rule, not because of Joe Stalin's shenanigans.

Wallace Coverage

"Will less people die under a false slogan if it is spoken in English rather than in German?" Henry Wallace asked in a speech designed to show that the United States is following in the footsteps of Nazi Germany by overemphasizing the Bolshevik bogey. And the story of his speech was buried on page 6 of The Washington Post. Yet it was plain that the former Vice President of the United States had made a strong effective speech for peace and against the dangerous ideas that are leading to war.

On the same day, Sunday, October 10, The Post carried a front-page story on a speech to be made by another candidate for the Presidency, Mr. Thomas E. Dewey. And what was the import of this speech? The Republican candidate was going to outline a "forward-looking program" for American labor!

It is precisely such treatment of Mr. Wallace—by practically every segment of the American press — that belies everything that is said editorially about this country's great desire for peace with the Soviet Union.

Mr. Thomas' Light

Suddenly, the loud speakers and floodlights of John Parnell Thomas have gone dead. Who turned the switch? And why?

Can it be that sobering thought follows an appeal to the Supreme Court by one of the victims, libel suits by two others, and certain disclosures by Drew Pearson?

Perhaps the Thomas Committee chairman is headed for lonely exile in New Jersey, just as the Brewster Committee chairman was packed off into lonely exile in Maine. Political bosses have little patience with blunderers.

Perhaps politicians are beginning to learn that if congressional committees are too badly misused, both public opinion and law will make themselves felt.

Pat On The Back

A recent discourse on the merits of capitalism printed as a newspaper advertisement by General Electric begins by asking, "How does it happen that America has the world's highest standard of living?" and answers that it is because of our system of private property, free enterprise and open competition.

This conclusion seems to me to be based on a misconception. The writer of the discourse seems to have overlooked the fact that capitalism was the dominant economic system in practically the whole civilized world four decades ago; that it was in effect in Russia before communism, in Italy and Germany before the Fascists and in England before the recent turn toward collectivism.

It seems to me that the resources of great organizations could be used far more profitably in an effort to determine what the special conditions have been that made it possible for capitalism to achieve so much greater success with us than merely in self-congratulation.

Such study might bring us to a better understanding of the reasons for the periodic depressions, with their attendant distress and unrest, that bring us so dangerously close to both economic and political disaster.

South Carolina Democrats

Here in South Carolina we are all good Democrats. Everybody knows that. In election after election, we have polled a higher percentage of Democratic votes than any other State in the Union; and no one but a Democrat has held political office in South Carolina since we recovered from the effects of the Yankee Plan, following the War Between the States. Even the Federal courts have taken judicial notice of our unswerving Democracy by ruling that the privilege of voting Republican in South Carolina is no privilege at all.

In short, we in South Carolina have been accused variously of prejudice, stupidity, hypocrisy and tyranny; but no one has ever thought to question our Democracy. It is a record of which every South Carolinian may be justly proud.

In recent months, however, there have been some new developments. Not that we have become any the less Democratic. It's only that there is now much greater difficulty in knowing just how a good Democrat should act. There are some things we do know, of course.

We know, for example, that a good South Carolina Democrat doesn't get up and walk out of the national convention, however acceptable such conduct may be in an Alabama or Mississippi Democrat. We know also that it's still good form to say you're going to walk out, even if you don't; and that it's entirely proper to exhibit open hostility to everything that takes place in the convention after you said you were going to walk out but didn't.

Certain authorities, headed by our Governor, maintain that the acceptable course is immediately to attend another convention, organized by those who walked out of the first one, and there to nominate for President on the "Dixiecrat" ticket some good Democrat who can stand on his head after marrying his secretary (see Life magazine for November 17, 1947) and who threatened to walk out of the first convention but didn't. That the only man possessing these several qualifications should happen to be our Governor is, of course, only a happy coincidence.

Another sizable group of authorities, styling themselves "conservative," contend that, since we didn't walk out of the first convention, we shouldn't mess with the second. The correct procedure, these folks argue, is to support the principles of the Democratic Party and work to defeat the President's civil rights program.

Finally, there is the awesome authority of J. Waties Waring, Federal judge for the Eastern District of South Carolina, who has declared that all South Carolinians are entitled to enroll and vote in the Democratic primary, and that all who vote in the Democratic primary should swear to support the Democratic nominees at the subsequent general election.

Since the judge thus makes us all officially Democrats, it's difficult to understand how we could ever manage to produce a non-Democratic nominee whom a Democrat might be tempted to support in the general election; but I reckon the judge just wanted to nail the thing down. I reckon he just wanted to make doubly certain that no foreign "ism" like Republicanism should ever worm its way into the life of this State.

Thus we citizens of South Carolina are confused and pained. It is no longer a simple, straightforward thing to be a good Democrat. There now appear to be at least three different kinds of Democracy, and it is by no means clear that any one of them is good. To espouse the first type of Democracy may mean no more new postoffice buildings or school lunch programs for South Carolina; to espouse the second type may mean too many new postoffice buildings with an FEPC agency firmly established in each; and to espouse the third type may result in the outright annexation of South Carolina by the United States of America.

In the circumstances, there is obviously but one possible course for a person of discernment. I shall vote a split ticket. I shall support Governor Thurmond for President, Senator Barkley for Vice President, and Judge Waring for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Court And Politics

IT WAS Mr. Dooley, the gorgeously irreverent character created by Finley Peter Dunne, who remarked that the Supreme Court followed the election returns like ordinary mortals. Presumably the court can also follow the public opinion polls, which this year show so clearly how the wind is blowing.

That would in itself be enough to explain the dismay among certain members of the court over President Truman's proposal to send Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow to talk with Stalin. No matter how sincere the President may have been in his belief that such a move would help the chances for peace, it would plainly have had major political overtones.

Little imagination is required to visualize the Chief Justice returning from his mission, stepping from his plane and telling a waiting world that Stalin will cooperate for peace. While the resemblance to Neville Chamberlain's return from his visit to Hitler with "peace in our time" would occur to the thoughtful, the drama could have been counted on to capture the waning hope of a despairing world.

The court would once again become the focus of a political struggle. This is deeply disturbing to some of the brethren on the Supreme Bench who believe that each excursion into extra-curricular activity weakens the judicial function and casts a shadow of doubt on the disinterestedness of the court.

IN AN ADDRESS curiously overlooked, that point of view was vigorously expressed last June by Justice Felix Frankfurter. Speaking on the eve of the political conventions, Justice Frankfurter at a banquet of the American Law Institute cited high authority to buttress his own view of "how circumspect a justice of the Supreme Court should be."

He quoted from a letter written by Morrison R. Waite, Chief Justice from 1874 to 1888. Waite was being actively promoted for the Presidency of the United States by friends and admirers, including his own nephew. To his nephew he wrote:

"In my judgment, my predecessor detracted from his name by permitting himself to think he wanted the Presidency. Whether true or not, it was said that he permitted his ambitions in that direction to influence his judicial opinions. I am not one of those who believe he did so consciously, but one who occupies this position should keep himself above suspicion. There can't be a doubt that in these days of political-judicial questions it is dangerous to have a judge who thinks beyond the judicial in his personal ambitions.

"Can I, with propriety, permit my name to be used for the formation of political combinations? If I do, can I remain at all times and in all cases an unbiased judge in the estimation of the people? If I am not, shall I not degrade my office? Put these things in your pipe and smoke them and tell me if you think I ought to permit my name to be used."

FRANKFURTER went on to say that "believing profoundly that the general attitude thus expressed by Chief Justice Waite binds us," he was thereby "foreclosed" from discussing subjects of immediate political interest. Most of his listeners had no difficulty relating his remarks to events soon to capture the headlines.

A short time later Justice William O. Douglas was a central figure in the effort of the liberal-labor wing of the Democratic Party at Philadelphia to sidetrack President Truman. As an alternative he was to be nominated for Vice President.

FDR took Justice Owen J. Roberts off the court to serve as head of the commission that investigated the Pearl Harbor disaster. President Truman persuaded Justice Robert H. Jackson to serve as prosecutor for the United States at the Nuernberg trials. Jackson was absent from the court for more than a year.

Many have felt a dangerous concept of the court was growing up, making it as a kind of House of Lords with its members available at any time for special assignments of a delicate and supposedly nonpolitical nature. The Vinson proposal fitted into that pattern.

In January there will be a Republican in the White House (short of some entirely unforeseen and highly improbable event) and there will be a Republican Congress. While Supreme Court justices presumably purge themselves of their political affiliations, the fact remains that the nine justices were all appointed by Democratic Presidents and with one exception they were themselves Democrats. The position of the court is certain to be contentious enough without any extracurricular activity.

"Russian Star"

Your October 7 editorial, "Russian Star," is interesting chiefly as illustrating the ideological error into which a decadent capitalist editor is bound to fall when he tries to interpret the exalted objectives of the Soviet. You slander them grossly in your suggestion that they are so greedy as to covet the whole heavens. If you had observed them more sympathetically you would have seen that, for the present, the comrades are concentrating on getting possession of the whole earth, and that they are quite content to postpone the acquisition of the balance of the universe.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Dewey, Taft And The Congress

CINCINNATI.—What is to be the relationship between President Thomas E. Dewey and the Eighty-first Congress? This question is already more urgent than the outcome of the election, which is now virtually a foregone conclusion. And it is appropriate to ask the question in this city, the personal stronghold of Senator Robert A. Taft, whose strong character and superior ability make him the natural leader of the more conservative congressional Republicans.

Not long ago, Taft's opposite number in the House of Representatives, Speaker Joseph W. Martin, passed through Ohio on a campaign speaking trip. He told friends here that he would stand for no dictation from the White House, even when its occupant was Republican. Similarly, Martin's henchman, the great tax-cutter, Harold Knutson, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, has intimated to Republican insiders that President Dewey may need taking down a peg or two.

In fact, however, Martin and the other members of the junta are simply old-line, professional party regulars. Another such was the late Senator Joseph E. Robinson, Senate Democratic leader until 1937. And although Robinson was an infinitely bigger man than Martin, the first thing Robinson did every morning until he died, after putting in his false teeth, was to swallow his principles. If Robinson stuck with Roosevelt in order to be regular, one can expect Martin to stick with Dewey.

If anyone fights Dewey, it will be Taft, who always refuses to compromise beliefs. Taft has already openly expressed his uneasiness at the line taken by the Dewey-Warren team. And unless the new President briskly abandons the progressive, internationalist brand of Republicanism he is offering the country in this election, it is hard to see how a Taft-Dewey conflict can be avoided. They would like to agree but they cannot.

THESE FACTS, in turn, confer a curious special interest on the gubernatorial contest here in Ohio. The Republican incumbent, Gov. Thomas Herbert, a slightly improved version of Senator John W. Bricker, is rather breathlessly defending his seat against former Gov. Frank Lausche.

Lausche may not be an ideal administrator but he is a man of obvious integrity, high purpose and appealing personal color. If Lausche defeats Herbert, he will immediately become a formidable potential candidate for the Senatorship when Taft must run again in 1950. And that Lausche will defeat Herbert is far from impossible.

Two factors favor Lausche, aside from the contrast between himself and his opponent. First, Ohio has long had the habit of voting for Governors and Presidents of opposite parties. In 1924, for instance, while giving Calvin Coolidge a majority of nearly 600,000 over John W. Davis, Ohio chose a Democratic Governor, Vic Donahey, by a majority of nearly 200,000.

Second, while Bricker was Governor, he made it much easier for Ohioans to indulge in their habitual ticket-splitting. In order to protect himself from Roosevelt landslides, he passed a law by which Ohioans now actually vote for national and State candidates—for President and for Governor, for instance—on two separate ballots. Dewey is strong in Ohio and his strength will still help Herbert. But for the reasons noted, the best local experts estimate that Dewey's Ohio coattails will have to be at least 350,000 votes long—a really whopping majority—to send Herbert back to Columbus.

LAUSCHE is hinting that if he wins the Governorship, he will still hesitate to oppose Taft for the Senate. Bricker is the man he says he wants to beat. Yet Lausche is highly unpredictable. And the mere possibility of such strong opposition is bound to influence Senator Taft's choice of a role in the next Congress.

Taft is reported to have decided already to relinquish his Labor Committee chairmanship. He is known to be considering taking one of the vacant places on the Foreign Relations Committee but probably only in the uncertain event that Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg becomes Secretary of State instead of John Foster Dulles.

But this still leaves the question of Taft and the Senate leadership entirely open. As of now, Taft seems to want the leadership. He may leave the floor leadership of the Senate Republicans to Senator Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska. But the chances are that he will seek for himself either the formal title of majority leader or the permanent chairmanship of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, which comes to the same thing.

On the other hand, if Taft has to think about facing Lausche in 1950, he may prefer to retain the freedom of action of an individual Senator. And thus this Ohio gubernatorial election may end by influencing the Dewey-Congress relationship more than any of the hotly disputed senatorial contests. For if Taft does not plunge into the fray against Dewey, no one will.

Labor-Farmer Split GOP Aim, Barkley Says

Los Angeles, Oct. 12 (AP).—Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democratic vice presidential nominee, accused the Republican Party today of seeking to divide the laboring people and farmers into two groups.

Addressing an estimated 1000 Californians at the Ambassador Hotel, Barkley said Republican candidates have told farmers that high living costs are caused by high wages paid to workingmen and have told labor audiences that high farm income is to blame.

"Any man who seeks to drive a wedge between the farmer and the laboring man is not worthy of the support of either," the Kentucky Senator said.

Barkley said a comparison of the records of both major political parties would show conclusively the Democrats always have been the best friends of farmers and workingmen.

Truman Opens Personal Attack on Dewey

Dewey and a noisy ovation when he lit into Congress. Warmed by the hearty applause, Mr. Truman issued a blanket invitation to those in the House to come to Washington "so I can give you the same kind of a reception."

Rips Into Congress Again

He said Congress "crippled price supports" by waiting until the eleventh hour to extend them and cutting CCC funds for grain storage bins.

"If you have to sell your corn for less than the support price for lack of storage, you will know that the blame lies on the Republican Party," he told the Illinois farmers.

He charged Dewey indorsed what Congress had done "in order to get the nomination." The President did not identify the "reactionaries" he said Dewey is lining up with, but hinted at least one of them by recalling his company in Illinois. Governor Dewey on his first trip to this State indorsed Senator C. Wayland (Curly) Brooks, outspoken isolationist, for reelection. As he traveled West he backed others with isolationist records.

As a substitute for Republican farm proposals, Mr. Truman outlined a four-point farm program for "Democratic abundance" at "the best answer in the world to the threat of communism."

He proposed (1) a permanent system of flexible price supports (2) an expanded soil conservation program (3) an extended school lunch program and further efforts to improve the diets of low-income families and (4) strengthened farm cooperatives and rural electrification and better housing, roads and educational facilities for the farmers.

Aboard the train as he rode into Illinois was Stevenson, who is running Gov. Dwight Green a tight race in the State's gubernatorial contest, and Senator Scott Lucas, just back from a tour of six European countries. Douglas, opposing Senator Brooks in the senatorial race, was not aboard the train, but the President plugged for him just the same.

Lucas, meanwhile, hotly denied to newsmen that Mr. Truman's canceled plan to send Chief Justice Fred Vinson on a "mission to Moscow" has reacted politically against the President.

"The average person wants peace more than anything else and thinks the President made a step in the right direction," said Lucas.

"If anyone tries to play politics with it, as Mr. Dewey and Mr. Vandenberg have almost done, they will hear from the voters."

At every stop in Indiana, Mr. Truman chatted in nostalgic vein about James Whitcomb Riley's "Old Swimmin' Hole," and other Hoosier poets and writers.

But he never failed to come out of his reveries with a political uppercut like this one:

"Lincoln would be out of place with present day Republicans. The Republicans don't think any longer about government 'of the people, by the people and for the people.'"

Earlier, at Richmond, Ind., he started the day out with a hard poke at Governor Dewey's 12-point labor program.

Pulling out the "record" of the Eightieth Congress, he said it not only passed the Taft-Hartley Act and refused to raise the 40-cent an hour minimum work day but took social security away from nearly a million workers."

"Now, that's action," he said. "They (Governor Dewey) are talking about something else this morning."

Then he lapsed into reminiscence at Greenville, Ind.

Here in Hamilton County, he recalled, the rooster was first used as the helm of the Democratic party.

"In 1892, when Grover Cleveland was reelected, my father decorated a rooster weather vane with all the colors of the American flag," he told the crowd.

"That flag flew from that rooster as a sign of victory in 1892 and nearly all through Cleveland's Administration . . . I was 6 years old then . . . I don't mind admitting it."

Then Harry Truman, book critic, who nearly ripped to pieces Fred Hartley's new volume on the Taft-Hartley Act in Akron, Ohio, last night, benevolently reviewed the works of James Whitcomb Riley.

"Middle Westerners like myself all look upon your town as a sort of shrine because we feel that your own great poet . . . belongs to all of us.

"There was a lot of down-to-earth common sense in James Witcomb Riley's poems, and we could use more of that in the world today. I don't think there is a kid in the country who doesn't know Orphan Anne . . ."

Literary Whistle Stop

At each whistle stop, the literary recollections continued. He talked to thousands at Crawfordsville, Ind., about their "famous" writers:

"Lew Wallace, Meredith Nicholson, 'Alice of Old Vincennes'—Thompson, I think, wrote that book. He lived here until he died. It has been my privilege to read most of the books your famous men have written and especially have I been interested in Riley's poetry."

At Danville, Ill., he told about the time "a hundred years or so ago, when a group of Abraham Lincoln's lawyer friends put him on trial before a kangeroo court down at the old McCormick House because his lawyer fees were too low. Lincoln lost the case and was fined a jug of whisky."

Then he added this stinger:

"Republicans don't charge low fees any longer. The higher the better is their motto."

Henry F. Schricker, Democratic nominee for Governor, and every Democratic candidate for Congress en route, rode the rails through Indiana, and took a bow with Mr. Truman at every stop.

And at Daville, he picked up Lucas, Stevenson, and State Chairman George Kels, for the ride through Illinois.

In plugging for Stevenson here, he made a slight bobble.

"The first political banner I ever wore was a cap with a sign on it that said 'Cleveland and Stevenson'," Mr. Truman said. "That was the father of Adlai Stevenson."

Actually, Stevenson told newsmen, it was grandfather.

At Decatur, Ill., Mr. Truman told the voters how he estimated crowds.

"I figure 4850 square yards to the acre and about two people to the square yard," he said. "Now, I see about five acres of folks in front of me."

That would make about 48,000 people by Truman's yardstick. Police said 12,000 was nearer the figure.

Dewey Using Harsher Words In Criticism of Truman

that welcomed President Truman about 10 days ago.

In Louisville the New Yorker drew 15,000, whereas Mr. Truman attracted something like 40,000.

Governor Dewey's speech in Louisville's Lincoln Park, his main oratorical effort of the day, was devoted largely to foreign policy. Praising the bipartisan foreign policy, he said that if the Republicans and Democrats had not been working together, our adversaries would have been able to seize upon our election campaign confusion to pursue their aggression.

Having said this, however, he went after President Truman, saying: "Even with the rich benefits of our bipartisan foreign policy, we have not seen the gains the American people had a right to hope for in these years since the shooting war stopped.

Soviet Obstacle Acknowledged

"In part, this has been due to the clumsiness, the weakness and the wobbling of the present Administration. In part, it has been due to the Administration's failure to consult the Republicans before making sudden and vital policy commitments. These have almost invariably got the country deeper into trouble."

But he concedes that many of the obstacles the Nation has run into were beyond the control of any American.

"They are founded," he said, "in the aggressive designs of the ruthless, ambitious leaders of the Soviet government. It has been the Soviet leaders' stubborn refusal to cooperate with other nations that has constantly checked our progress toward the goal of peace with justice."

Governor Dewey sharply criticized the Democrats for the "extravagant claims" they made in their 1948 platform—claims, he said, which made it appear that they were the sole authors of the United Nations, the Marshall Plan for European recovery, the hemispheric defense pact of Rio de Janeiro, and even aid for China.

United Support Needed

"Well, now," he said, "I seem to remember that the names in the headlines when these laudable steps were taken read something like this: Senator Vandenberg, Congressman Eaton, Harold Stassen and John Foster Dulles. These men are Republicans."

"Let it pass. I am interested only in what our bi-partisan foreign policy has done for America and what it will do in the future . . .

I do not believe in partisanship in foreign affairs. In the months and years ahead we shall need the united support of the American people in our earnest labors for peace. We shall need the support of Republicans, Democrats and independents, and I want you to know that we shall extend full partnership to the representatives of all the American people in shaping our policies.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch Comes Out for Dewey

St. Louis, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Post-Dispatch announced today it favors the election of Thomas E. Dewey as President.

The newspaper praised the Republican nominee's record as an administrator and said President Truman lacks "the stature, the vision, the social and economic grasp, or the sense of history required to lead this Nation in a world crisis."

The Post-Dispatch supported Roosevelt for three of his four terms, including 1944 when he was opposed by Dewey. It favored Alfred M. Landon over Roosevelt in 1936.

"Mr. Dewey is not the ideal candidate for President," the Post-Dispatch continued, "but we accept him readily on balance. In indorsing him, we are aware that on many issues his views do not conform to those of the Post-Dispatch."

2 Labor Groups Scoff At Dewey's Program

Labor groups supporting President Truman last night dismissed Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's labor program as "political demagoguery" and "Uncle Tom's doghouse for labor."

Chairman George M. Harrison of Labor's Committee for Truman and Barkley rejected as "beyond belief" the pledges of the New York Governor in his Pittsburgh speech Monday night to improve the working and living conditions of workers. It was only "political demagoguery," he said.

"Uncle Tom's doghouse for labor" was the description given Dewey's speech by Jack Kroll, director of the CIO Political Action Committee.

Warren Says High Prices Problem of All

En Route With Warren to Butte, Mont., Oct. 12 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren told a trainside crowd at Billings, Mont., today the high cost of living was not a partisan problem and that to solve it both parties must face "the facts of life."

The GOP vice presidential candidate said the high cost of living and housing are but two of the many serious problems confronting the Nation, problems which cannot be solved according to any partisanship.

"These are not partisan problems," he said. "The high cost of living is not a Democratic problem or a Republican problem. It is a problem of the American people that should not be solved according to any partisanship. It should be solved according to the realities of the situation."

Both parties, Warren declared, must put their "shoulders to the wheel. We are going to dig out the answers to these problems in a hard way. We are going to face the facts of life."

Warren asked the voters of Montana to send to the Senate Republican senatorial candidate Tom J. Davis of Butte, who is challenging the hold of the veteran James Murray, Democrat, on Montana's senior seat.

Dewey Is Splashed With Tomato at Rally

Mount Vernon, Ill., Oct. 12 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was splashed with a tomato which struck Mount Vernon's mayor tonight as the Governor addressed a political rally of 10,000 persons.

"Apparently I'm having some trouble with some small boys," the Republican presidential candidate said.

Mayor Harry Bishop who was standing near the Governor and Mrs. Dewey, was struck with a green and a ripe tomato. Bishop said some gravel was thrown at the speaker's platform also.

Police Chief Verner Pigg and State Police Capt. R. L. Winder said they believed the tomato-throwing incident "could be blamed on some small boys in the crowd."

Thurmond Says Big Parties Forget Tenets of Democracy

Lexington, Ky., October 12 (AP).—J. Strom Thurmond, candidate for President under the States' Rights Democratic Party banner, tonight said both major political parties in America are forgetting the great principles of democracy in a bid for votes.

In a speech prepared for delivery at a States' Rights rally, Thurmond said "the basic issues which are of fundamental importance to every American are being obscured."

This was the South Carolina Governor's second major campaign speech in Kentucky. He spoke over a State-wide radio network. Thurmond's first address of the campaign in the State was delivered at Madisonville September 25.

His schedule calls for other addresses tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. in Frankfort and at 8 p. m. in Louisville. He will speak briefly in Versailles at 10 a. m. and in Shelbyville at 7:30 p. m.

From Louisville he goes to Covington for an address Thursday night, with brief stops earlier in the day at Bedford and Carrollton.

Thurmond said the principles of American democracy are being perverted and destroyed by the Democrats, Republicans and the Progressive Party.

"Until the higher leadership of our political parties, of whatever name, become convinced that the American people are not lazy enough and not stupid enough to permit this kind of political bargaining," Thurmond said, "our liberties will be in danger.

"Until we can restore this country to the type of leadership it had in 1789, we cannot be certain that our democratic rights will be protected.

"The fact that three presidential candidates today have indorsed an unconstitutional program is enough to delight every Red and every fellow traveler on the globe."

Thurmond said Communists would be made happy by passage of the antipoll taxe bill, the antilynching bill, antisegregation proposals and the so-called FEPC (fair employment practices) bill.

Wallace Plans Saturday Trip

Chicago, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party presidential candidate, will return Saturday to the deep South, where his racial views made him a target for eggs and tomatoes last month, it was announced tonight.

C. B. Baldwin, his campaign manager, announced that the Progressive nominee would make a one-shot trip to Georgia to speak at an interracial meeting in the Church of God at Dalton.

Wallace will leave here Saturday in his chartered plane for Chattanooga, Tenn., and will drive from there to Dalton. Baldwin said more than 800 ministers of the church were expected to attend.

The Dalton speech was announced after Wallace had rearranged his campaign itinerary to spend three days here conferring with Baldwin and other party officials from the New York headquarters.

After the Dalton appearance, Wallace will fly north for speeches Sunday at Detroit, where he originally was scheduled to appear Saturday.

The Gallup Poll: Truman 1st in Only 3 of 11 Western States

National Box Score Shows Dewey Leads In 29 of 35, With South Yet to Be Counted

This is the fourth in a series of Gallup Poll articles presenting the first Nation-wide survey in 1948 of presidential standings in each of the 48 States. Including this report on the Western States, all sections of the country have been covered except the Southern States. The article next Friday will survey the South and the institute will give an analysis of the State-by-State roundup for the Nation on Sunday, October 17.

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 12.—In the Mountain and Pacific Coast regions, where both candidates have campaigned extensively, eight of the 11 States today give Gov. Thomas E. Dewey a popular vote advantage.

The Republican nominee is now leading in Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, California, Washington and Oregon. In this region, President Truman is ahead in Arizona, Montana and New Mexico.

Presidential standings in 35 States now have been reported in the institute's first national, State-by-State survey. The final 13, all in the South, where the tradtiional Democratic stronghold has been impaired by the Dixiecrat rebellion, will be reported Friday.

Dewey leads in 29 States.
Truman leads in 5 States.
Truman and Dewey are tied in 1 State.

In the case of a number of these States, the lead that one candidate has over another is so slight that later figures might reverse the current standings.

The present State-by-State survey is the first of a series to be presented by the institute prior to election day. Field interviewers in the 48 States will continue to poll representative voters on their presidential choices up to three or four days before election day. Meanwhile, any changes in the institute's figures for individual States will be reported as they are found.

Outside the South, the Pacific Coast section in 1936, 1940 and 1944 gave the Democratic candidate the highest percentage of the popular vote of any section in the country. The mountain region was close behind in third place.

In 1944, Roosevelt captured 9 of the 11 States in the combined regions, compared with the 3 in which President Truman today is ahead. Four years ago Roosevelt lost only Colorado and Wyoming in these regions.

As of the moment, this is the picture of political sentiment in the Mountain and Pacific States:

"If the presidential election were being held TODAY, how would you vote—for Truman, for Dewey, or for Wallace?"

Mountain

	Dewey	Truman	Wallace	Undec.
Arizona	43%	47%	5%	5%
Colorado	51	41	1	7
Idaho	46	42	5	7
Montana	40	47	7	6
Nevada	47	44	3	6
N. Mexico	40	49	2	9
Utah	45	42	3	10
Wyoming	50	41	3	6
Pacific
California	48	41	6	5
Orogan	47	38	5	10
Wash.	45	43	3	9

Political observers will scan this list not merely to see which presidential candidate leads in individual States. They will also look for clews at to the effect the presidential tickets are having on Senate races which have an important bearing on which party will control the Senate.

Senatorial elections will be held in six of the eleven Western States reviewed today. Democratic seats are involved in Colorado Montana and New Mexico, while Republican Senators are up for reelection in Wyoming, Idaho and Oregon.

Popularity of a national ticket often influences the chances of a party's State and local candidates, chiefly because of the tendency on the part of many voters not to "split" their ballots on election day.

The lead that presidential candidates hold in today's standings provides some evidence of the strength that the national tickets will lend to State candidates. It should be kept in mind, however, that institute figures deal with presidential candidates only and do not constitute a prediction of senatorial races in any State.

Surveys Give Score in 24 States

Previous surveys in the Gallup Poll's first national State roundup covered the New England, Middle Atlantic, East Central and West Central sections. The scoreboard for the 24 States in those areas is as follows:

New England

	Dewey	Truman	Wallace	Undec.
Maine	56%	34%	3%	7%
New Hamp.	54	36	3	7
Vermont	60	33	1	6
Mass.	50	43	2	5
Conn.	43	39	4	14
R. Island	37	48	3	12

Mid-Atlantic

	Dewey	Truman	Wallace	Undec.
New York	47%	34%	11%	8%
N. Jersey	50	38	3	9
Penn.	50	41	3	6
Delaware	49	36	1	14
Maryland	47	44	4	5
W. Virginia	49	43	2	6

East North Central

	Dewey	Truman	Wallace	Undec.
Illinois	49%	40%	*	11%
Michigan	52	41	4	3
Indiana	52	40	2	6
Ohio	51	42	3	4

* Institute interviews in Illinois did not ask respondents whether they would vote for Mr. Wallace, since they will not have a chance to do so in November.

West North Central

	Dewey	Truman	Wallace	Undec.
Iowa	53%	38%	2%	7%
Kansas	59	34	2	5
Minnesota	45	45	4	6
Missouri	40	51	3	6
Nebraska	53	39	-	8
N. Dakota	50	34	6	10
S. Dakota	54	38	1	7
Wisconsin	51	40	3	6

Current evidence indicates that a larger proportion of voters than normal have not yet made up their minds. In some States it is possible that this group might determine which candidate carries the State. Such changes will be reflected in future institute surveys.

Distillers Are Uniting for Attack on Rules On Imported Whisky Labels and Advertising

American distillers are joining together for an attack next Monday upon rules governing imported whiskies.

The attack is aimed at what American whisky makers term the "double standard" of whisky labeling and advertising.

The hearing will be held here before the Alcohol Tax Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Similar hearings were held by the ATU in San Francisco last week.

The American distillers complain because imported whiskies are not required to have labels on the bottles giving full details about the age of the whisky, the nature of the blends, etc.

The complaints of the domestic distillers are:

1. That Scotch, Irish and Canadian whiskies are stored in barrels that may be used and reused over and over again. American whisky stored in reused coope age may not claim age (except for corn whisky) and must bear statements of storage in second-hand barrels.

2. That Canadian whisky can claim longer age than similarly produced American whisky. In Canada, all whisky becomes a year old on January 1—so that Canadian whisky produced in December is a year older than American whisky produced that month.

3. That foreign whisky can claim age if stored in metal tanks—a storage not used in this country.

4. Foreign whisky can be labeled whisky even though the straight whisky in it is less than 20 per cent. American whisky with less than 20 per cent real whisky must be labeled "blended whisky."

5. That foreign distilling regulations permit grain spirits or wine to be added to the whisky aging in the barrel without altering the age claim for the entire barrel. American regulations prohibit any changes in the contents of a barrel while in storage.

Cuba Sugar Damage Still is Unestimated

Havana, Cuba, Oct. 12 (AP).—Trade circles said today there was no way of estimating damage to the 1949 Cuban sugar cane crop by two recent hurricanes.

Experts said much would depend on the weather. Some cane in areas of three of Cuba's six provinces is bent over. Some of it was broken off by the storm, but this was not general, they said.

If rains come, the bent cane will straighten up and yield its normal amount of sugar. If no rain comes now, it will remain on or near the ground, and sugar content will decrease sharply, the experts said.

Egypt, Iraq Recognize Gaza Government

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—The Egyptian and Iraq governments today recognized the new Palestine Arab government at Egyptian-held Gaza despite the opposition of Trans-Jordan's King Abdullah.

Abdullah opposed establishment of the Gaza government, which includes Haj Amin el Husseini, exiled grand mufti of Jerusalem, on grounds that it was tantamount to recognizing the partitions of Palestine.

Burma Land Nationalized

Rangoon, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Burmese Parliament passed a land nationalization bill last night. It places all arable land under government ownership and provides compensation to former owners. The government will redistribute the land for rental to farmers.

DeWitt Rice checks gasoline at a tank at Baltimore.

Sure, he works for us... but he also works for YOU!

Ask DeWitt Rice here whom he works for and he'll answer "Esso Standard." Ask him how he likes it, and he'll say "Fine!"

In the long run, however, DeWitt and everyone else here at Esso Standard works for you. We either do a good job meeting your needs, or we just don't have any job.

So – since, you're the real boss – maybe you'd like to know just why DeWitt likes his job so well.

The reasons are simple . . . but mighty important to a man at work. His pay has been good, for instance. His job has been steady. His future looks solid. He has the chance to retire at 65 with income for life. He's got a cash nest-egg growing steadily in a Thrift Plan. He knows there's room to get ahead, and the company will help him do it. If he has questions or suggestions, he knows he can go straight to the boss and talk it over. In other words, he's got security.

The reasons he now has all this go back over 30 years. At that time, this company set up a "good jobs policy" to work and plan by. It was based on the belief that people are the most important thing a business has—and that good jobs would get and hold good people. This policy has made history in industrial America.

Today some 28,000 people work for you in Esso Standard Oil Company. They haven't had a strike or major work disturbance in 30 years. Over 8,400 of them have been with us over 20 years and the average for all of them is almost 14 years with the company.

Right now you are asking them to turn out more oil products for you than ever before.

Being the kind of workers they are, it's not surprising that they've pitched in with all-time high production records to help meet your growing needs for oil!

Boy, Killer at 14, Studies in Prison

Bobby Snyder, a convicted killer at the age of 14, must remain behind the walls of the Maryland State Penitentiary in Baltimore at least until 1962.

But when he does step forth it will be with an education equal to that of any college graduate.

He is a lifer, this Darnestown, Md., boy, but he will be eligible for parole after he has served 15 years.

If he is paroled, will he return to society an embittered young man with a mind poisoned by prison life?

Time alone can answer that question. But Bobby will have had the advantage of an education as complete as he might have gained if murder had not entered his life.

It is planned to equip him with the equivalent of a college training through correspondence courses.

Bobby's crime was shocking, and left him virtually friendless. His foster parents had scolded him for being out late. On November 23, 1946, in the family farmhouse at Darnestown, Bobby killed—with a shotgun his foster father, Ross H. Snyder, Washington attorney, foster mother, and his foster sister, Jane, 12.

One of the few offers of assistance the boy killer received came from the Volunteers of America.

Col. W. O. Ulrey explained that the Volunteers of America, of which he is divisional director, sought to be a "friend of the friendless."

"And this boy certainly was left friendless," said Colonel Ulrey.

After Bobby was sent to prison, the Volunteers decided he should not be deprived of an education, so they paid for a correspondence school course from the American School of Chicago.

The marks he has received on his school work are exceptional. His last grades were for a period ended July 26 and represent second year high school work.

For six papers in English composition and rhetoric, he received these marks: 100, 99, 94, 90, 97 and 90.

In American history he received grades of 98, 85, 72, 94 and 90.

In mathematics his marks were 95, 98, 94, 88, 83 and 95.

And in science he scored 90, 97, 95, 88, 97 and 95.

Bobby has been enrolled by the Volunteers to go right through high school courses and it is planned at this time to give him a college education through the mails.

Bobby, who was 16 last April 3, has no visitors except Colonel Ulrey. And he has admitted to him that he is often blue and wonders "why did I do it?"

Prison officials try to keep him segregated as much as possible from the older prisoners. He associates with no more than two or three of them a day as he does blueprint work in the machine shop. At night he is locked in a cell alone.

Count at Quebec May Be Patterson Beneficiary

Quebec, Oct. 12 (AP).—A Polish count, who once lived in a 50-room palace in Warsaw and now occupies a small apartment in Quebec's cramped Latin Quarter, may benefit under the will of the late Mrs. Eleanor Medill Patterson, Washington newspaper publisher.

Tall, lean 54-year-old Count Wladislaw Tyszkiewicz is one of 17 persons to whom the former publisher of the Washington Times-Herald had been making payments up to the time of her death last July 4. In her will, she asked that the payments, which have not been disclosed, be continued.

Pending settlement of the $16,500,000 estate, the grandson of Princess Radziwill and his wife, the former Countess Stadnicki, are living frugally, almost in complete seclusion, in a four-room apartment.

The count disclosed today it was Mrs. Patterson who arranged for them to come to the United States from Portugal in 1941, ending a two-year flight, part on foot, from Poland to Russian to Rome.

Patterson Will Case Up

$25,000 annual income, real estate in New York and North Dakota and personal property. She filed the contest against the will last month.

James F. Reilly, one of the executors' attorneys, yesterday criticized the plaintiffs for failing to name who they allege committed any fraud in connection with the will.

"They should name some party who exercised the fraud," declared Reilly, ". . . if they don't know who exercised the fraud they can't prove it."

Judge Morris passed over this point, however, by noting that while names are generally given, "John Doe" is often supplied, and "that issue is not now before us."

Earlier, Judge Morris said that in all his experience on the bench he had never encountered at such an early point in will litigation the question of whether the issue centered on challenge of a whole or only a part of it, but he noted that the will was highly complex.

In arguing that the validity of the "whole will" should be the issue in the case, William A. Roberts, former People's Counsel here and an attorney for Countess Gizycka, said:

"It seems to me that by breaking it (the issue) down . . . it's practically an invitation to a jury to determine that (only) one particular clause was obtained by undue influence . . .

"Several things can happen at a trial," he said. "It might be alleged that a beneficiary was the one who exercised the influence to 'kill' the natural heir in the eyes of the mother."

"Oil Progress Day", October 14th, marks 89th year of the industry's service to consumers, communities, employees, and shareholders.

You're entering the "Oil Age" and the door is opened wider by Shell Research

Even greater comfort and convenience are coming from petroleum through advances in petrochemistry—as oil becomes "raw material" for a wide range of chemical products...

Why only "entering"?

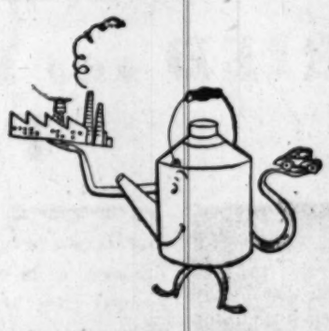
Though man has used oil for 7000 years, our first real oil well is only 89 years old . . . and the motor car barely 50. The real "Oil Age" began when research scientists—such as those at Shell—saw petroleum's great potential as a chemical raw material . . . and began "tailoring" its molecules into more and better products.

Today's Aladdin:

Shell scientists have created—from oil—plastics, fertilizers, chemicals, antiseptics . . . and expanded the list of company products from 7 to over 1000. A recent citation to Shell says: ". . . in recognition of meritorious contributions to the advance of industry . . . and of a long-time program of pioneering in petrochemicals."

"Castles" built to order:

To make petroleum more useful, Shell maintains laboratories with equipment so modern that some is even invented on the job. Beside Shell Laboratories for General Research, others are: a unique Agricultural Laboratory . . . a Fuel Oils Laboratory . . . a complete Laboratory for Exploration and Production of Oil . . . the first Laboratory for Jet Fuel Research.



At your service:

Though you may not drive a car, "oil" serves you daily. It helps light and heat your home, helps industry turn out products you need, increases your food supply . . . may even be in your pair of shoes. Petroleum, to Shell scientists, is a challenging raw material whose molecules work for all of us in this "Age of Oil."

Anniversary Fetes Honor Columbus

Washington's Italian-Americans and the Knights of Columbus yesterday led the city in observance of the 456th anniversary of the day Christopher Columbus sighted land in the Western Hemisphere.

In wreath-laying ceremonies at Columbus statue in Union Plaza, they paid tribute to the intrepid Italian seafarer whose discovery of America has been called "the greatest single act of courage" by an individual.

A message from President Alcide de Gasperi of Italy which cited the "community of sentiment" between his country and the United States highlighted the Italian-American observance.

His message read by Franco Bounous, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, said:

"The help Italy receives from America in its effort for the reconstruction of its country is the best proof of the two countries' community of sentiment. The Italian people recognize this and they will not deceive those who had faith in them."

Count Carlo Sforza, Italy's foreign minister, also sent a message in observance of Columbus Day.

A wreath was placed fo District Italian-Americans by Dr. Frederick D. Rossini, president of the Washington Academy of Science.

Chairman of the Italian-American ceremonies, which began at 10:30 a. m., was Dr. Raphael Manganaro. The day's events wound up at 7:30 p. m. with a dinner dance at the Shoreham Hotel, sponsored by the Lido Civic Club.

The Knights of Columbus, which placed nine wreaths at the statue in ceremonies beginning at 11:30 a. m., heard a brief address by William A. Kehoe, State deputy.

Kehoe said, in part: "Let us firmly resolve that we shall strive to emulate the unconquerable spirit of Columbus. In our every act let it be known that we, as Knights of Columbus, stand for the God-given principles of freedom, justice and democracy."

Further observances of Columbus Day were held at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. at the Continental Hotel and a banquet last night at the Knights of Columbus hall, 918 10th st. nw.

GOP to Win Tennessee, Sen. Taft Predicts

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 12 (AP). — Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) departed for Florida today, leaving behind a prediction Tennessee would be in the Republican camp in the November election.

Taft boarded a train in mid-afternoon for an overnight trip to St. Petersburg, where he is scheduled to speak tomorrow. He is on a swing through the South on behalf of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for President.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Yom Kippur Begins With Chanting of Kol Nidre in Jewish Synagogues

Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, began last night at sundown with the chanting of the Kol Nidre in Jewish synagogues and temples throughout the world.

In a sermon at Adas Israel Congregation, 600 I st. nw., Rabbi Solomon H. Metz said that the tendency in America today is no longer away from, but toward religion.

"Everywhere you see the signs of a great yearning in the hearts and in the minds of the people for spiritual wisdom and inspiration," he said.

He hailed the rebirth of Israel as "the beginning of the most significant renaissance of the religion of our prophets and sages. It has restored our faith in ourselves, in the ethical and moral values of our prophets and the God of our fathers," he continued.

The Washington Hebrew Congregation held Yom Kippur services in Constitution hall, where an ark constructed to harmonize with the architecture of the building gave religious sanction to it as a place of worship.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld told the worshippers that "religion to our fathers down through the ages was not a mere sense of awe expressed in ritual, but its application to personal decency, to social justice, to human compassion, to the building of peace based on justice and in the spirit of loving kindness."

The world can achieve peace and brotherhood only through the spirit of forgiveness and reconciliation, Rabbi Harry J. Kaufman said in his Kol Nidre sermon at Beth Sholom Congregation, 8th and Shepherd sts. nw.

In order to forgive, previous blunders must be corrected, promises kept, and solemn pledges fulfilled, he concluded.

Yom Kippur services will continue through today, and will be concluded at sundown tonight.

"Easy" Spindrier with Automatic Spin-Rinse

The Spindrier makes a 9-lb. washing a snap. Here's how: while the second tub is being washed, clothes from the first load are placed in the Spinner. The warm suds are returned to the wash tub; a fine needle spray flushes the clothes with a double rinse so quickly that the water runs clear in three minutes. Uses only 3 gallons of warm water, whirls out 25% more water than a wringer.

DOUBLE DEPENDABILITY

"TRIED and PROVEN" OVER BILLIONS OF PASSENGER MILES

CONFIDENCE grows out of performance—not promises. The record of Eastern is its best advertisement — a record that has been gaining confidence for twenty years.

The flying public knows as I do, that Eastern men and women are sincere in the performance of their duties...eager to please...to provide comfort and the utmost dependability for our passengers.

Our airliners exemplify the finest engineering accomplishment in all aviation. New-Type Constellations, famous DC-3's and DC-4's have an outstanding record for reliable performance.

We're proud of our record. We stand on our record for "TRIED and PROVEN" DOUBLE DEPENDABILITY.

Hey KIDS! Write a RADIO SLOGAN
Win up to $100 and be on the RADIO!

It's The Washington Post
SAINT MYSTERY COMIC SLOGAN CONTEST

Open to all grade school, junior high, and high school kids in the Washington area.

HERE'S WHAT YOU DO: First, begin by turning to the comic pages of The Post and get acquainted with "The Saint." Next, decide what you want to say about this new mystery comic. Then say it—in a slogan, a jingle, what have you. With or without sound effects indicated—it doesn't matter.

Finally, write your slogan on a piece of paper, put on your name, address, age and school and send it to the "Saint Mystery Comic" Contest Editor, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. You may enter as many slogan ideas as you wish. Be sure your name and address are on each one.

The contest lasts until October 31. Entries received after October 31 will not even be opened. So get going—now. Read the Saint Comic in The Washington Post. Put on your thinking cap. Try your idea out on your family. Then send it in. In case two or more persons send in the same slogan, the one reaching the judges first will be considered original, so it pays to get your ideas in right away.

5500 Get VD Tests In 3-Month Drive

More than 5500 persons have been examined at public clinics or treated by private physicians for venereal disease since the local drive to curb VD was launched July 1, it was announced last night.

An average of 1500 persons a month have applied for VD examinations at the Health Department's three free clinics the past three months, the department reports. This represents a 44 per cent increase over the monthly average for the first three months this year.

Meanwhile, telephone calls to the department's special VD information number, Metropolitan 4600, have tripled, rising to an average of 300 a month. Operators have referred more than 1000 area residents to free clinics or private physicians.

At the same time, 4400 vials of penicillin, each containing a curative dosage for one gonorrhea case, have been sent free to doctors. To date, 1083 treated gonorrhea cases have been reported by doctors.

Encouraged by such signs of success in the drive to educate the public as to VD symptoms and bring infected persons to clinics of private doctors for treatment, the Health Department's VD bureau reports it plans to intensify the year-long publicity campaign.

Two Defend Incinerator Bid Award

An incinerator built by the Nichols Engineering and Research Corp. "would be the best" for Arlington, Richard Wirt, Arlington public service director testified yesterday in Circuit Court.

The Arlington County Board's award of the contract to the Nichols firm is being contested by the losing bidder, the Morse Boulger Construction Co. of New York. Its bid was nearly $18,000 less than the Nichols bid.

Wirt said he had spent "considerable time" studying the two firms' bids on mechanically stoked incinerators before favoring the Nichols model.

Also testifying yesterday was County Manager A. T. Lundberg. He said he also had studied the two bids carefully and felt Morse Boulger "did not have sufficient experience" in building the type of incinerator needed by Arlington.

Lundberg said he had accepted at face value the Morse Boulger specifications which said seven men would be needed to operate the plant compared with six for Nichols.

Earlier in the hearings, it was stated that the Morse Boulger incinerator would cost $124,000 more to operate over a 20-year period because of the higher labor cost.

Health Officer To Get Raise

in a series of proposed meetings Thursday.

Colasanto was asked to issue the permit after City Attorney Joseph Pancoast ruled that a local ordinance establishing a $25 license fee for sound trucks was illegal.

"I make this ruling," Pancoast said, "although I do not lean toward the applicant involved. On the contrary, I am against his campaign."

Councilman Albert A. Smoot also said he was not in sympathy with the Wallace campaign but expressed his regret that Wallace supporters had been treated "most unfairly" in other cities.

"I certainly hope they will be given fair and impartial treatment while in our city," he said.

Mayor William T. Wilkins told Colasanto he saw no reason why the permit should not be issued. Then he added, "It certainly will not hurt Alexandria but at the same time I don't believe it will do the Wallace cause much good."

Miss Lynn Forrestal, advance agent for the Wallace group, expressed her deep appreciation for the "spirit of democracy" in which the councilmen entered the discussion. After the meeting the permit was issued by Colasanto.

Operated Store 30 Years

A respected member of Washington's Negro community, Johnson had operated his store at the 3d st. location for about 30 years.

According to Mrs. Sarah Bryan, a neighbor of the victim for more than 10 years at Rhode Island ave. nw., he had been a pharmacist since his graduation from school.

She said he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Fannie Evangeline Johnson; a daughter, Laverne Johnson, who is a District public school teacher, and a son, Lacount Johnson, a District fireman.

Mrs. Bryan said Johnson had long been a member of St. George Episcopal Church and that he "never missed a service."

Dr. Cornely of Freedmen's Named to Gallinger Group

Appointment of Dr. Paul B. Cornely, medical director of Freedmen's Hospital, to the executive committee of Gallinger Hospital, was disclosed here yesterday.

The appointment, under contract terms in which Howard University Medical School is assured training privileges at Gallinger, was made by Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, dean of the medical school. It is effective upon its receipt by Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, superintendent at Gallinger.

The committee post was created in the agreement signed on October 5 by officials of Georgetown, George Washington and Howard University medical schools for joint use of Gallinger's medical training facilities. The committee also comprises the hospital superintendent, his medical chief of staff and two representatives each from Georgetown and George Washington universities.

Dr. Cornely is a graduate of the University of Michigan, 1928, and received his medical degree there in 1931. In 1934, he was awarded the degree of doctor of public health at that university.

He came to Washington to teach preventive medicine and public health at Howard University, July 1, 1934, and his remained here ever since. Last November, he was appointed medical director at Freedmen's Hospital.

Dr. Cornely, a member of Alpha Omega Alpha, the national honorary medical fraternity, is a fellow of the American Public Health Association. He is also a member of the American School Health Association, the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, the American Student Health Association, the National Student Health Association, and the Medico-Chirurgical Society of the District of Columbia.

He is married, has one 10-year-old son, and lives at 3103 13th st. ne.

Postmen Defeat Plan To End Segregation

Miami, Fla., Oct. 12 (AP).—An attempt to eliminate separate branches for Negro and white postmen was defeated today by delegates to the thirty-sixth biennial convention of the National Association of letter carriers.

An attempt by the New York delegation to change the constitution to that effect was beaten down at a business session. Separate branches for Negroes and whites have been in effect since 1943.

Divorce Suit Filed Against Raymond Moley

One on the Aisle—

Screen's Unkind To Lads in Gray

By Richard L. Coe

HISTORIANS WON'T AGREE, but I'm convinced that the Confederacy lost the war because its doughtiest daughters all had yens for blobs of male beauty that weren't yet dry behind the ears.

Of course, all I know is what I learn from the movies, of which Keith's "Tap Roots" is the latest entry in the War-Between-the-States folio. This one has everything but has nothing if you get what I mean.

There was Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind," eating her heart out for Ashley. And remember all the pallid males the girls loved in "Jezebel" and "So Red the Rose," not to dredge up everything from "The Heart of Maryland" on through the years?

Had the Confederacy really been imaginative, it would have dressed the gals in gray and kept the boys at home swilling mint juleps on the old front portico. They were decorative enough, I guess, but they weren't half the men the girls were.

And if you don't think this is true, give a thought to the guys the spirited ladies dallied with when the lads took off. Rhett Butler was too much the smarty to get into uniform, but his virility knocked Miss O'Hara for a loop. The same thing is happening to Susan Hayward these days with an editor played by Van Heflin. Van is quite a husky type in the script, but you don't catch him getting into uniform.

Just Like Vivien

Susan has all the heart troubles Vivien did as Scarlett. Susan wanted to marry her pretty boy, but he kept putting off the wedding date and playing in the woods—with sister Julie London. Like Vivien, Susan has a mammy, a Patrician mother, a proud-of-his lineage papa, trouble with her corsets and a quick yen for the naughty man who doesn't jine up. Unlike Vivien, Susan gets hopelessly crippled in a riding accident, but that's not of much account, for before you know it she's up and around again, riding hell for leather through the valley.

All this stems from a novel by James Street, who told of a valley in Mississippi which threatened to secede from the State when the State seceded from the Union. It's a novel switch in the usual Southern loyalties, and for a while you think Street has stumbled os something different. But it's the same old moonshine and honeysuckle stuff, albeit the Mississippi mansion doesn't try to hold a candle to Tara.

The acting makes one novel drift. It strives manfully away from any attempts whatever in the way of making like Southern dialect. You know they're striving, for Susan slips up once and says 'Suh" just the way Scarlett used to. But everybody else talks damyankee throughout, and just to show that Wanger's writers are up to snuff, they stick in a couple of cracks that smack of the smokier bistros' hightalk.

Boris Karloff as a Choctaw

Everything else is in the Scarlett tradition, with Susan's gloved hands beating away on Van's back when he kisses her for the first time; gradually the pummeling shifts to a caress and you know that one more Confederate has flip-flopped to a lad who was smart enough not to get into uniform.

What happens to Susan and the rest of her poster-like pals once the war drags to its close, one is left to imagine. None of them, I regret to say, is a good enough actor to make you care, though Boris Karloff does a Choctaw Indian with enough King's English to make me mildly curious as to whatever happened to him.

But as for the men of the Confederacy, I'm afraid "Tap Roots" continues the tradition of treating them all as mental and emotional delinquents; all, that is, who get into uniform. But, as I said, all I know is what I learn from the movies.

"TAP ROOTS." Universal-International release produced for Walter Wanger by George Marshall. Screen play by Alan LeMay with additional dialogue by Lionel Wiggam. From the novel by James Street. Directed by Marshall. Photographed in Technicolor by Lionel Lindon and Winton C. Hoch. At Keith's.

Swedish 'Fire' Proves Clinker

BILLED AS "the first American showing" and presented as a hopeful successor to the memorable "Torment," a Swedish film called "Blood and Fire" opened yesterday at the Pix. It is an unimportant arrival and not even a fifth cousin of "Torment."

In fact, to put it honestly, "Blood and Fire" is a slow-moving and tasteless story which Sweden would have done well to keep at home. The screen play is by Bertil Malmberg, a noted Swedish poet who in recent years has been interested in the Oxford Movement.

His quest for Faith serves him in his plot, the story of an aging Salvation Army man who conceives a passion for a lady of the night. This waif has been under the thumb of a handsome, ruthless boxer, but has been trying to break away from him. She ultimately does after endless travail. And the conversion of the boxer costs the life of the Salvation Army man.

The pace is less than a crawl, there is endless talking and even my gallant Swedish translator, Else Strom of Stockholm's Aftontidningen, found the whole venture a ghastly mistake for all concerned, including herself.—R. L. C.

New Teacher Need Is Put At 1.3 Million

By The Associated Press

The United States will need 1,390,000 new teachers in the next 10 years, a commission of educators said yesterday.

At the present rate of training, it was added, the Nation is going to get only about 200,000. Many of these, the report said, will be "poor ones," able to offer little more than "maid service."

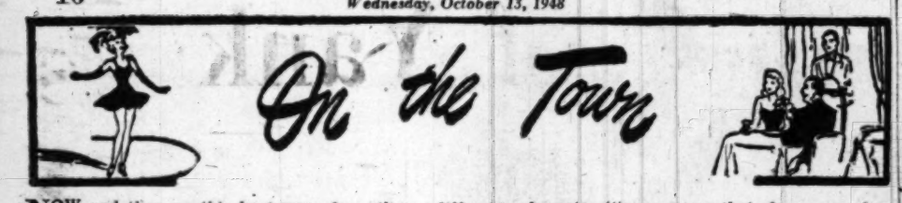
Eleven educators compose the National Commission on Teacher Education and Professional Standards—a National Education Association unit—which reported at a news conference yesterday on its recently completed survey of educational needs.

The commission said that in the next 10 years the United States will need 1,045,622 new elementary teachers, 243,720 new secondary teachers and 100,000 new college teachers.

"The most critical need," it was reported, "is for elementary teachers qualified to provide education of children in the crucial ages from 6 through 13, when expert teaching is absolutely essential to the child's success in life."

School population in the next decade probably will increase by nine million, it said, and classrooms to serve them adequately would cost at least 10 billion dollars.

The commission said discrimination in salary standards, overloading of classrooms and competition from other careers for women are contributing to the teacher shortage.



NOW and then on this beat you get a line on a good story or have some freak incident flip you out of the beaten track.

Sitting around one of the clubs during the day waiting for one of the local tub thumpers to pour forth his usual deluge of superlatives about an anything but superlative act, we heard someone call us, and by name. We turned, looked around, couldn't see anyone and figured someone had called passing by.

Came the voice again, another look and still no one was around. The voice practically bowled up over. This time there was no mistaking . . . the sound came from the microphone in the middle of the dance floor. "Hey, Jack, want a REAL story?" Well you can ignore something like that just so long. "Of course, if you have one for us." The mike hunched its long neck down a little lower and began this strange lament.

"Ever wonder how a mike feels when these different characters use us during their acts?" "Frankly, no," were the only words our astounded tongue could form. "Take what I call a choker type," friend mike started. "Thank gosh it's electricity that my life depends on and not air. That jerk glides up to you as sweet as can be, then when the music starts, his meathooks reach out and clamp on to you as though you were holding him up. Comes the last note of the song, he pries himself loose as though he's fought the Battle of the Bulge single handed, and walks off the floor.

"Next you have the gal we call, 'Old Creepy Hands.' There's a real one! As soon as she hits her key her hands start moving up and down you like as if she wanted to tickle you to death.

"Then too, you can't forget 'Old Clammy Palms.' This guy is usually so scared the minute he walks on the floor that you wonder if he can even make it to you. As soon as he touches you, you start thinking of rust. This stainless steel they're using on us is a real life saver. When his number is done you need a chamois to clean you up.

"Of course you can't neglect the tipper group that always sees how far they can push you without making you dizzy.

By this time we could do nothing but shake our head in sympathy with the poor guy. We'd never realized before just what one of these things had to go through to make an honest buck. They never ask more than to be kept in good repair and fed the right kind of current. You can see the type of treatment he gets in return for all this patient service. That's why we decided to give you the mike's side of the story today. Just about now we could use another brandy!

Now to switch for a moment from talking mikes to timekeepers. The Watchmakers of America recently had a dinner meeting at Olmsted's. Precision is their goal and they usually get it. Just to stay in character they decided that each course of the dinner would be served at a specific time. Each speaker rose, gave his speech and sat down, according to schedule. Everything went well until 10:15 when they had planned to leave. By that time the women were talking so much that they couldn't drag them away from the spot for some time. We personally don't believe that they ever expected the women to really stick to a set schedule. That's asking too much of mere flesh.

'Chutes to His Goal . . .

BAILS OUT AT 76—Walter Morgan, 76 years old, completed a long-time ambition, he said, when he parachuted from an airplane at 10,000 feet. As a result of the jump, he is the hero of the ice cream soda set in the small town of Fosston, Minn. "I wanted to show the kids I could do it"

War Started Mary Lasswell On Her Career as a Writer

Mary Lasswell, who will be one of the speakers at The Washington Post's Authors' Luncheon October 20, resisted a literary career—but it overwhelmed her.

Lasswell

While she was a student at the University of Texas, an English professor after reading one of her themes asked: "Why don't you write?"

Aghast at the idea, she transferred to the School of Education.

When another professor advised her to have her work published, she took off for New York to study music. There she met Henry Bellamann, the author, and the inevitable question, "Why don't you write?"

Dogged by the pen, she married Clyde Lasswell, a Navy man, and went to the South Seas for two years. Then the war. Lieut. Lasswell packed his gear, kissed his wife goodby and before he hopped aboard a cruiser inquired, "Why don't you write, dear?"

Mrs. Lasswell yielded and "Suds in Your Eye," a wartime best-seller was the result. She followed this with "High Time" and "Mrs. Rasmussen's Book of One-Arm Cookery."

Her latest literary work, "Bread for the Living," published by Houghton Mifflin, is a serious novel which has as its backdrop the Mexican-Texas border where the author was reared.

Other speakers who will appear with Mrs. Lasswell include James A. Michener, author of the Pulitzer Prize winning "Tales of the South Pacific," now appearing in the Sunday editions of The Washington Post; Pat Frank, who wrote "Mr. Adam" and the current "Affair of State," and Frances and Richard Lockridge whose latest "Mr. and Mrs. North" mystery is "Murder is Served."

The author's luncheon will be on Wednesday, October 20 at 1 p. m. in the Presidential Room of the Hotel Statler. Tickets are on sale at $3 in leading bookstores and department store book departments.

Death Details Told Jury

Witnesses told of the slaying of Prince Georges County Policeman Charles Caldwell yesterday before the Prince Georges County grand jury at Upper Marlboro, Md.

The grand jury recessed last night before hearing all of the witnesses present and is expected to continue the case today.

Thomas Hall, 55, and his 20-year-old daughter, Janie, were held for the grand jury by Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie, both charged with murder of Caldwell and felonious assault upon Policeman Wallace Baker.

Caldwell was shot and killed and Baker shot and severely beaten when they attempted to arrest the Halls at the Hall home in Deanwood Park, Md., on June 12.

Young to Resume Hearings Friday In Phoebus Case

District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said yesterday he will resume hearing on the William M. Phoebus case on Friday at 1:30 p. m.

Notification that the closed hearing, recessed on September 22, will be resumed is being given John B. Diamond 3d, attorney for Phoebus. A District building inspector, Phoebus is charged with submitting false inspection reports.

Phoebus is now on annual leave pending outcome of his case. He has testified that he went to the movies when he was to have made the inspections because he was in ill health and needed a rest.

Lee's Devotion To Duty Cited

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 12 (AP).—Gov. William M. Tuck today said a devotion to duty as exemplified in the character of Gen. Robert E. Lee would go a long way toward solving many problems facing the Nation and the world.

The Governor addressed more than 100 persons from 27 States attending ceremonies commemorating the seventy-fourth anniversary of the Confederate leader's death.

The observance was held at Stratford Hall in Westmoreland County.

Governor Tuck congratulated members of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation for doing an "excellent job" restoring and preserving Lee's birthplace.

Today also marked the twentieth anniversary of the foundation.

Mrs. Charles D. Landier of Greenwich, Conn., first president of the foundation, also was a speaker.

Lashley Gets Va. Post

Richmond, Va., Oct. 12 (AP).—William A. Lashley, 28, of Lawrenceville, former Lynchburgh and Richmond newspaperman and World War II Navy veteran, has been named director of public relations for the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Takoma Park Parents To See School Routine

Parents of students attending the Takoma Park Junior High School will observe a typical school day routine today at 8 p. m. in the school on Piney Branch rd.

Sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Association, the program will include 10-minute periods of class work with a brief summary of the semester's schedule by teachers. The business session will be held in the auditorium during the "lunch hour" period.

Stengel Named Manager of Yankees

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE DEFLATION of the Boston Braves by Cleveland this week exposed once more the disparity between the two major leagues. By this time it is pretty apparent that the National League is overmatched when World Series time rolls around.

POVICH

The Braves won their pennant by seven games and were clearly a stand-out club in the National League. In the American League, Cleveland was barely the best in a three-team finish that called for a play-off game. Yet the World Series was not much contest despite the fact it went six games.

It's getting to be a pretty sorry record for the National League in the World Series. Their pennant winners have won only seven series in the last 22 years. The cry used to be that the Yankees were a super club and their 10 World Series conquests since 1927 did not truly reflect any superiority of the American League over the National. That is leaky logic, though.

Since 1933, only one National League club other than the Cardinals has been able to win a World Series. The Reds of 1940 were the exception. When the good Cardinals weren't in the series, the National League was virtually doomed. The Yankees were in only one of the last four World Series, yet the American League won three of them.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE is supposed to be the pitchers' league, yet Cleveland over-powered the Braves with pitching. It's supposed to be the tighter defensive league, putting a premium on one-run leads, the sacrifice hit and base stealing, yet the Braves had no double-play defense to compare with the Indians, couldn't steal as many bases, and expired finally when Sibbi Sisti bunted into a double play.

It's a different kind of baseball that they play, though, in the National League. They don't have the same craze for the big inning. That's understandable because they don't have the power hitters down the line. Their pitching used to be better than the A. L.'s, and their catchers traditionally throw better and more often, but basically they're content to think and nudge runs across the plate rather than blast.

The two types of baseball stems, I'm sure, from different managerial policies. National League managers know what they have to beat—teams in their own league that play for one run. The American League is interested in the guy who can hit. Scouts from the two leagues may be looking over the same shortstop. If he's a good fielder, but isn't hitting as much as .280 in the high minors, the AL scout isn't enchanted. But the NL scout signs him.

IT WAS THE HITTING potential of Larry Doby that attracted the Indians last year when they signed him out of the Negro American League. They tried him at second base last season, and reluctantly gave up on him as a bad infielder, but that promise of Doby's hitting power was difficult to disregard. They tried last spring to find a place for him in the outfield.

In the outfield Doby didn't look good either at the start of the season, but the Indians went along with him. He was a wild swinger who apparently needed more seasoning, and on a day in Washington last May they were ready to send Doby back to the minors to let him look at some more pitching.

It was a bit of a delicate choice, though, for the Indians. Manager Lou Boudreau wanted to break the news of his release to Doby gently. Vice President Hank Greenberg of the Indians was in uniform for a pregame workout at Griffith Stadium that day, and Boudreau commissioned him to tell Doby that the Indians were sending him back. Greenberg sat on the bench with Doby before the ball game.

GREENBERG FELT DOBY out. Would it break the colored boy's spirit if they shipped him back to the minors for another season? "Nothing's going to break my spirit, no matter what happens," said Doby bravely. "I know I can play ball in the majors, and if not this year, it will be next." Greenberg said he was glad Doby felt that way about it.

"Do you think you can hit .300 in this league?" he asked Doby.

"I don't want to brag, but I think I can hit .310 up here if I play regularly."

Greenberg said the decision would be made in a couple of days. Meanwhile, Doby was in the Indians' lineup that afternoon. That was the day when he at least postponed Cleveland's decision to send him out. It was the day he hit the second longest home run in Griffith Stadium history—the 420-foot blast into the amplifier horns atop the centerfield fence. The next day at Boston, Doby reached the distant centerfield bleachers with another homer. He stayed with the Indians, batted .301, and was their leading hitter in the World Series, his job with the Indians safer right now than Bob Feller's.

Pick-the-Winners Lineup 2d Week

THIS IS THE second week of The Washington Post's Pick-The-Winners football contest. It will be conducted weekly through November 20.

This week's list of games looks difficult. So put on your thinking caps. Remember, this is a contest of skill, designed to reward those who know their teams and are students of the game. Follow accounts of the teams, study the scores each week, then make your choices of the winners.

The winner of each weekly contest will receive two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 27, and an all-expenses paid trip to the big game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four (4) tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. This game will be selected by The Washington Post and announced well in advance of the game.

CASEY AND JOE—Charley (Casey) Stengel (left) is congratulated by Joe DiMaggio in New York yesterday after Stengel had been named as the new manager of the New York Yankees for 1949 and 1950. He succeeds Stanley (Bucky) Harris, recently ousted as the Yankee pilot

He's Given Contract for Two Years

New York, Oct. 12 (U.P.)—Casey Stengel, a garrulous, wrinkle-faced Missourian who once bossed the Boston Braves and the Brooklyn Dodgers, was named manager of the New York Yankees today for the next two years.

The 57-year-old former outfielder, who led the Oakland (Calif.) Accorns to the Pacific Coast League championship this season, signed a two-year contract to succeed Bucky Harris, who was fired last week.

The announcement came just exactly 25 years to the day Stengel, then a New York Giant, hit a home run that gave his club a 1 to 0 triumph over the Yankees in the 1923 World Series.

No salary terms were announced by President Dan Topping, but it was understood that Casey will be paid about $25,000 a year under a two-year contract.

Stengel, freed by President Clarence (Brick) Laws of the Oakland Club to negotiate with the Yanks, said he had not made a decision on his coaches. George Kelly, who worked under Johnny Neun and Bucky Walters at Cincinnati, and Neun were believed to be in line.

"The owners have promised to back me up," said Stengel in a press conference shortly after President Dan Topping of the club had announced his new manager. "I'll see what I need, but I plan to go slow. You can tear a club down a lot faster than you can build it up."

Stengel's appointment came as no great surprise. He had been mentioned prominently for the post soon after Harris "resigned" because of disagreements with General Manager George Weiss.

Today Weiss explained Stengel's apointment this way: "We combed the list of everybody in baseball—major and minor leagues—for our new manager and Stengel proved the most capable. He's got great patience with young players. He gets along well with his players and he's a 24-hour manager."

Stengel, "delighted to be with the Yankees," said, "I haven't had much time to think about the club. At a glance I'd say there's not very much to be done, so much has been done before. We've got a great bunch of players."

Stengel's presence at the Yankee helm will be a sharp contrast to Harris. While Bucky was an affable, quiet-spoken fellow, Stengel is the fiery type—a man who can out-Durocher Durocher when it comes to arguing with umpires.

Stengel, too, is a bear on perfection. He went so far as to hire a track coach at Brooklyn when he thought the Dodgers were too slow running the bases.

It was he who once lifted his cap to an umpire at home plate and a captive sparrow flew out.

Another time, when umpires refused to call a game because of darkness, he wigwagged for a relief pitcher with a flash light.

Stengel saw service as a major league manager at Brooklyn from 1934 to 1936, and then the Braves from 1938 to 1943. He never finished better than fifth in the majors.

But as a minor league manager he met with considerable success. He first hit the top by bringing Milwaukee home to an American Association flag in 1944. The next year he went to Kansas City, where he finished seventh, and thence to Oakland where he was second in 1946, fourth in 1947 and first this year.

Lions Lose Opener to Cleveland, 5-2

The Washington Lions paid their respects to nobility last night, bowing humbly before the Cleveland Barons, 5-2, in front of 4214 opening night spectators.

The Lions took nearly the whole first period to remember that they were playing the American Hockey League champions who boasted a 27-game regular season winning streak.

The Lions were in Cleveland ice for most of the first period and when Julian Sawchuck was ousted for charging Phil Vitale at the seven-minute mark, Larry Archambeault put the Lions ahead at 7:16 with a carom shot off goalie John Bower's ankles. Win Mousseau helped bring the puck into position and was awarded an assist.

Ab DeMarco tied it up with a minute and 45 seconds left in the period, after a pass from Roy Kelly. It was an omen. Cleveland kept up the drive in the second period, going ahead when Fred Thurier took a relay from Gordon Davidson and Ralph Wycherley and pushed the puck by Paul Gautheier.

Phil Vitale, back with the Lions after a two-year absence, played brilliantly on defense, breaking up the smooth Baron attack. Ken Schultz closed out the locals' scoring at 7:01 in the second period, on a play engineered by Archambeault and Mousseau.

Cleveland went permanently ahead in this period at 10:38. Pete Leswick dodged around Dick and Bud Foley and sent the puck through Gauthier from 10 feet out. Both Thurier and Leswick got another goal apiece in the third period.

Cleveland	Washington
Bower	Goal Gauthier
Allen	L. D. Vitale
Wares	R. D. Wilson
Holota	Center Schultz
Carse	L. W. Archambeault
Leswick	R. W. Mousseau

Spares: Cleveland — Defense, Davidson, Sprout, Sawchuk; center, De Marco, Lavoie, Thurier; wing, Wycherley, Solinger, Kelly, Herchenratter. Washington—Defense, Foley, Dick; centers, Hayes, McGuire, McAtee; wings, Baber, Cluman, Brenchley.

Officials—Dunn and Reynolds.

First-period scoring: Washington—Archambeault (Mousseau), 7:18. Cleveland—Demarco (Kelly), 18:15. Penalty: Cleveland—Sawchuk, 2 mins., charging.

Second-period scoring: Cleveland—Thurier (Davidson, Wycherley), 4:07; Leswick (Holota, Carse), 10:38. Washington—Schultz (Archambeault, Mousseau), 7:01. Penalties—Archambeault (high sticking), Leswick (high sticking), Davidson (tripping).

Third-period scoring: Cleveland—Thurier (Wycherley, La Voie), 2:41; Leswick (Holota, Carse), 15:33. Penalty—Cluman (holding).

Grid Game Tonight

The Maryland Mohawks and Wasco Bullets meet in a 160-pound class football game tonight at Alexandria Municipal Stadium. Kickoff is at 8 o'clock.

Springfield Wins

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 12 (AP).—The Springfield Indians opened their 1948-49 American League hockey campaign here tonight by winning 4-2 over the Pittsburgh Hornets, a team they could beat only once last season.

Flyers Beat Buffalo

St. Louis, Oct. 12 (AP).—The St. Louis Flyers turned in their first shutout since the 1944-45 season by defeating the Buffalo Bisons 4 to 0 tonight in an American hockey league contest.

North Carolina Replaces Irish As Top Team

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—College football's "first ten" underwent a reshuffling after one of its dizziest Saturdays and the loud thump you heard was Notre Dame falling off the top rung.

The Irish who had held the No. 1 position for almost a year, were dumped to second place by North Carolina, a Dixie institution where a lad named Charlie Justice gets his higher learning.

Other shakeups in the weekly Associated Press poll of the nation's sports writers were these:

Southern Methodist University, an old tenant, and Minnesota were ousted from the select bracket.

Their places—though not exact positions — were taken over by Pennsylvania, the Ivy League champion, and Mississippi, defending titlist in the Southeastern Conference.

The total vote with points figured on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis (first place votes in parentheses):

1.	North Carolina (52)	1200
2.	Notre Dame (34)	1180
3.	Northwestern (25)	1172
4.	Michigan (24)	1103
5.	Army (5)	733
6.	California (10)	720
7.	Georgia Tech	589
8.	Pennsylvania (1)	388
9.	Penn State (1)	342
10.	Mississippi	136

The second ten—11, Minnesota, 121; 12, Missouri (1), 117; 13, Cornell, 97; 14, Southern Methodist, 74; 15, Clemson, 64; 16, Georgia, 58; 17, Nevada, 44; 18, Duke, 42; 19, Baylor, 41; 20, Oklahoma, 32.

Others—Texas Christian, 14; Columbia, 13; Arkansas and Ohio State, 12 each; Wake Forest, 11; Kansas and Texas, 10 each; Southern California, 8; Maryland and William and Mary, 7 each; Iowa and Tennessee, 6 each; Detroit, 5; Illinois, North Carolina State, Oregon and Santa Clara, 4 each; Washington, 3; Mississippi State, 2; Catawba and Indiana, 1 each.

Lambeau Fines Entire Packer Team

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 12 (AP).—The entire Green Bay Packer football squad was fined one-half of one game's salary today by Coach E. L. "Curly" Lambeau for the poor showing the team made against the Chicago Cardinals in last Sunday's National League football game.

Lambeau, who threatened that "saary adjustments" were likely immediately after his club looked bad in losing, 17-7, said today "the fines will stick in all cases except possibly several who may be saved by a review of the motion pictures of the game."

The films, not yet back from the processors, may reveal "extenuating circumstances," he said.

"We have always had a reputation for spirit," Lambeau said, "but we haven't shown it once this year. One of the big reasons this situation exists is that the boys are getting good salaries and they're content. For that reason there's got to be a penalty for losing."

In addition to the blanket fines, Lambeau said he was asking for waivers on Bruce Smith, former All-America halfback from Minnesota, now in his fourth year with the club, and rookie tackle Jim Kekeris, from Missouri.

The Packers, after winning three straight exhibition games and slamming the Boston Yanks in the league opener, 31-0, were 45-7, in the next game. They derouted by the Chicago Bears, 45-7, in the next game. They defeated Detroit, 33-21, two weeks ago and then dropped the Cardinal game to slide to fourth place in the league's five-team Western Division.

Throat Disorder

Navy Suffers Another Blow In Loss of Big Bill Hawkins

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 12 (AP).—Navy's wavering football stock took another dive today when Fullback Bill Hawkins was ordered to the hospital, perhaps for the next month.

The big Richmond, Va., veteran, who speared the Midshipmen's ground attack, is suffering from "acute infectious mononucleosis."

That, an athletic office spokesman explained, is a blood and glandular disorder. It apparently gripped Hawkins in the throat.

The loss threw Coach George Sauer's backfield into something of a disorder as Navy moves toward the "tough end" of its schedule. Already pummeled by California, Cornell and Duke, the Midshipmen encounter Missouri in Baltimore this Saturday.

After tangling with the Tigers who set back Southern Methodist, Navy takes on Penn, Notre Dame and Michigan before the most hopefully prophesied date for Hawkins' discharge.

Sauer indicated he would transfer Right Halfback Al McCully to fill the vacancy at fullback. Bill Powers and Jim Green would then share responsibility at right half.

The shift would not be too abrupt for McCully, who has occasionally spelled Hawkins this season.

Beside carrying the ball farther than any other Middie, Hawkins scored the only Annapolis touchdowns against Cornell and Duke. He also was a crack line backer on defense.

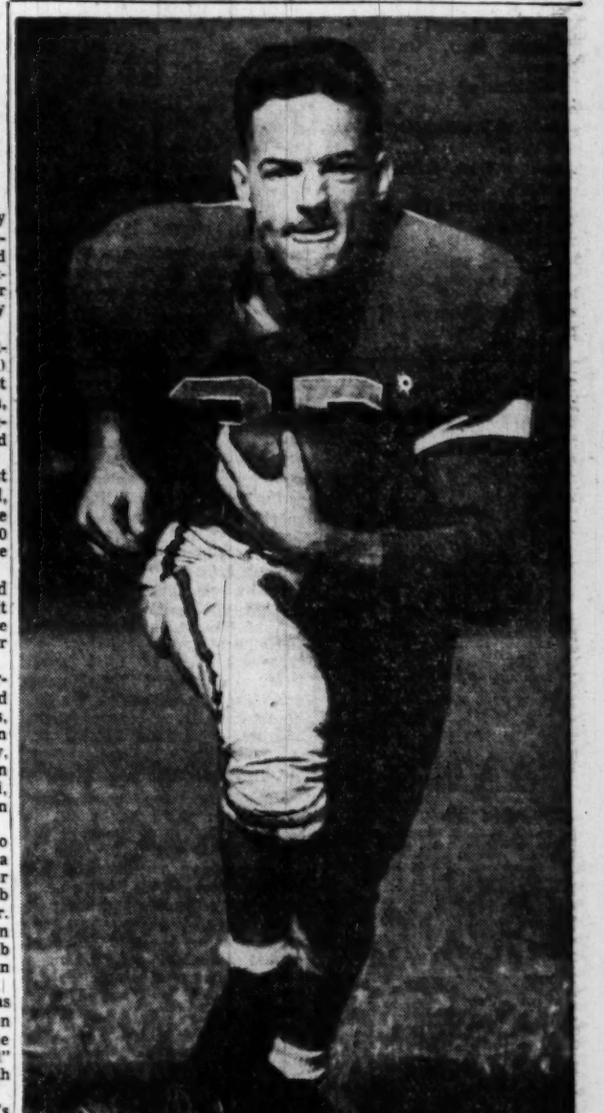
Cleveland Pipes Tribe Home With Big Parade

Cleveland, Oct. 12 (U.P.)—Tooting horns, screaming sirens, and raining confetti piped the Cleveland Indians back home today with their first World Series championship since 1920.

The good burghers of Cleveland had waited 28 years to whoop it up for a victorious baseball team, and they did themselves proud with a tumultous welcome parade watched by more than 100,000 persons.

Some 15,000 were at the railroad station when the Indians pulled in at 8:50 a. m. EST aboard a special train from Boston where the World Series victory was completed yesterday.

The team climbed into 10 open cars and paraded five miles down Euclid ave. in the wake of a police motorcycle escort and a blaring brass band.



SUCCESSOR TO EVANS—Halfback Frank Pattee, a young man who does everything well in football, is the University of Kansas' successor to Ray Evans, All-America Jayhawker backfield star last season. Pattee is cocaptain of the Kansas team that plays GW at Griffith Stadium Friday night

G. W. Wins Because Players Are Sold on Coach's Sincerity

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Yesterday I went over to George Washington University to get the real story on the Colonials' surprising success in football this season.

Surely, I said to myself, the Colonials must have something quite out of the ordinary.

There aren't two dozen players on the G. W. squad, yet the Colonials have beaten VPI, 13-0, and last Saturday whipped Virginia University, 20-12, for the first time in 51 years.

Maybe some of the players would be able to tell me what has gotten into those kids who have become the talk of the town.

So I asked Guard Dixie Howell, Quarterback Stan Burak and Halfback Dick Koester. All three were on the GW team of a year ago. They should know what the difference is between last year and this year.

"Sure, we can tell you what's happened," they said with relish.

"We've got faith for the first time—faith in the GW coaches and faith that they believe in us.

"A year ago things didn't go so well. We rarely if ever felt that there was a strong bond between us—that we had a common objective with the coaches.

"Not that we gave up. We simply didn't have that extra something that goes into winning. I guess it's what you call spirit.

"This season it's been different almost from the first day we reported to practice for Coaches Bo Rowland and Bo Sherman.

"For one thing, those guys don't give us any malarky. They don't say much at all. But what they do say is right to the point. We can understand it. And it's sincere.

"For example, when we took the field to warm up before one of our games this season, the players on the opposing team belittled us in a kidding sort of way.

"And when we trotted into the dressing room for last-minute instructions before the kickoff, we got the bronx cheer.

"In the dressing room, the coaches gave us the longest talk we've ever had so far. 'They're laughing at you; what are you going to do about it?' the coaches said. That was about all.

"Well, we did plenty; played as we had never played before.

"It all adds up to this: we feel like one big family now, and we're beginning to play like a real football team. The players are happier, parents are happier, students are happier and even the profs give us the nod once in a while.

"We may not win many more ball games this season, but we'll give any club in the country a fight, and that goes for that big Kansas outfit Friday night."

Tatum Becomes Man of Letters to Terps

Pep Talks to His Players on Paper

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

James Moore Tatum, two-letter man at North Carolina U., has become a man of many letters since assuming the football professorship at Maryland U.

During the summer months, Dr. Tatum communicated with his far-flung football flock with semimonthly letters. His lengthy epistles were a discourse on practically everything from the technique of the Split-T formation to the treatment of sore feet.

With the gridiron season on in full swing, Tatum supplements his three-hour daily classes with weekly letter to his touchdown pupils.

These do not deal in generalities. They are specific, yet chatty; homey, yet blunt words about what to expect from Maryland's football opponents on any given Saturday.

In this week's communication to his squad, the old letter-writer warns: "Duke is a fine football team and one which is tough to beat at any time. We are catching them when their offense has reached its peak. We can beat this ball club, though and it is a MUST for us. This will be our first real test and a victory will be well worth our time and effort."

In the salutation of the Duke-Maryland letter, Tatum points out that this week's treatise wasn't prepared simply to give his secretary, Miss Lou Emmons, something to do.

"Let's make certain," he writes to his boys, "that we read it at least once a day all through the week and study it every spare moment that you have."

He wrote:

"V. P. I. comes to Washington, D. C., on October 9 to engage Maryland University in a football game . . . They are fast and physically able to beat Maryland to score their first victory."

The College Park correspondent turned out to be 50 per cent correct. V. P. I. did come to Washington, D. C., on October 9 and did engage Maryland University in a football game, but they weren't fast and weren't physically or otherwise able to beat Maryland. The Terps won, 28-0.

On June 19, hardly two weeks after Maryland's summer vacation had started, Tatum dropped his boys this note:

"You men must not forget conditioning work this summer . . . If you are on a job where you have to wear heavy socks and your feet perspire a lot, make certain that you go barefooted some and paint your feet with benzoin."

In the same letter he also wrote:

"Just as we were about to write you another letter, Uncle

Sam expressed a desire to have a number of our boys in some sort of military training or else to come visit him for 21 months. Since we couldn't afford to do without some of you for 21 months, we've gotten the nonvets in ROTC . . ."

After a discussion of technical football in one of his summer letters, Tatum listed eight essentials of a good football player. Character topped the list and he cited The Washington Post sponsored National Celebrities Golf Tournament (adv't.) as an example.

He wrote:

"The National Celebrities Golf Tournament has just displayed the character of a champion. All the participants in this tournament were invited because they are registered as champions in their chosen fields. Every participant paid his or her own ex-

Many Fans Thought It Dead Heat

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 12.—In a dog-eat-dog stretch battle, two mares showed today all the courage befitting a race named the Queen Isabella and staged on Columbus Day.

A crowd of 10,000 discovered they were watching a real horse race when the W. L. Ranch's Honeymoon and Mrs. H. K. Haggerty's Rampart became a team at the head of the final lane and watchers yelled the selves hoarse as the horses went into line inches apart, according to the photo finish camera. But Honeymoon was the winner.

Many fans and the majority of press be personnel believed they had witnessed a de- heat.

A beaten-off third in the vest pocket field of five—no show betting—was Mrs. O. L. Nyberg's Irisen, a 4-year-old filly who was not without some excuse. Dr. Eslie Asbury's Brow- lan was fourth, with the Christiana Stables' Camargo trailing.

Md. Debut for Honeymoon

Honeymoon, the West Coast star, was making her debut in Maryland. However, the boys and girls with the mutuel gleam in their eyes were aware of her clippings and installed her a near-even-money favorite and she paid $4.60.

By winning the $10,000-added feature of the holiday card, Honeymoon ran her total winnings since her purchase by Harry Warner and Mervyn LeRoy to almost the $135,000 that was the price paid Louis B. Mayer.

The victory was worth $7880 to Honeymoon and brought her 1948 earnir s to a comfortable $74,880.

Jockey Porter Roberts was aboard Honeymoon and rode the daughter of Beau Pere the mile and a furlong in 1:52 for the best time of the meeting and the second fastest in the short history of the Queen Isabella, first annexed by Shine O'Night in 1941. Her fractional time of 1:13 for six furlongs and 1:39 1/5 topped anything shown here on the newly surfaced track.

Jockey Mike Basile rode Rampart and he put up an effort that coincided with her determination to hang on in the stretch battle. He did everything in the book to keep her going but Honeymoon, despite the top weight of 126 pounds, was the better. Rampart carried 124.

Rampart Goes to Front

Rampart went to the front at the break and had her pace forced by Irisen. Camargo was well placed on the inside and Roberts was rating Honeymoon.

At the far turn, Honeymoon began her move on the outside of the leaders. She shot to even terms with Rampart but Irisen was hanging on well between the front pace. Rampart began to bear out slightly at this point and Irisen appeared to have been squeezed back.

From that point to the wire, Honeymoon with Roberts urging as if his very life depended on the result, and Rampart, under Basile's desperate handling, fought it out stride for stride.

Rampart drifted out during the late stretch run but Honeymoon, jammed on the game mare, refused to be bothered and went into the finish line fighting for all she was worth.

It was a beautiful struggle to watch.

Favorite players also were successful in the day's steeplechase, third on the program, Mrs. E. Dupont Weir's Galatic, assuming command when the leader, J. R. Dwyer's Lively Man lost rider, won with daylight to spare with the Trainer J. T. Skinner entry of the Rokeby Stable's Polichinela, 2d, and the Shamrock Stable's Lion Rampant were second and third in the order named. The winner, ridden by Jockey M. Fife, paid $3.60 and was clocked in 4.01 4/5 for the about 2 miles.

There was a $168.60 daily double when J. V. Scelzi's Hampshire Boy came from behind to win the second race to the tune of a $19 win mutuel after J. T. Gibson's Reigh Morse had won the first.

Auto Racer Killed, 2 Hurt

Medford, Mass., October 12 (AP). John Ritter, 30, of Paterson, N. J., a midget auto driver, was killed tonight when he was struck by another racer as he was changing a tire at the Medford Bowl track-side.

George Hatfield, 40, of Boston, owner of the track, who was standing nearby, suffered fractures of both legs and possible internal injuries.

GW's Davis 9th in Total Yards Gained

New York, Oct. 1[illegible] (U.P.).—Fullback Andy Davis of George Washington holds down ninth place among the Nation's total yardage gainers according to figures released here today.

The 168-pound freshman from Washington, D. C., has gained 509 yards on passing and rushing in 111 times he has handled the ball.

Stan Heath of Nevada, tops the Nation in total offense with 731 yards.

Jim Walthall of West Virginia ranks second with 626 yards, West Virginia having lost once in four starts.

Tommy Thomason of VMI ranks third in passing with 515 yards, and Jim Finks of Tulsa fourth with 503 yards.

Michigan, Irish, N. C. Top List

Even with "breathers" a thing of the past, it's a little startling to realize there are only 11 major collegiate powers undefeated and untied in this young football season.

Sectionally, the list includes:
East—Army, Penn., Penn State, Cornell.
South—North Carolina, Georgia Tech, Maryland.
Midwest—Notre Dame, Michigan, Northwestern.
Far West—California.

And by late Saturday afternoon, barring a tie, the list is bound to be reduced by at least one. Around the Nation, the 10 coaches are pacing the floor with the realization that the charmed circle may be cut by more than just that one.

The game making the competition a little more cut-throat is the one at Ann Arbor, pitting Northwestern against Michigan. Northwestern survived its first acid test last week by besting Minnesota, 19-16. Now all it has to do is to take on the Michigan eleven that romped past Purdue, 40-0.

By all odds, this one should be the country's headline attraction. Michigan's Wolverines are putting on the line a 17-game winning streak that bridges three seasons.

Surprisingly, three of the 10 now unbeaten and untied teams have unbeaten streaks stretching over three years. They are Notre Dame, unbeaten since Great Lakes won in the last game of the 1945 season and tied only by Army in 1946; Penn State, 11 victories in a row and a Cotton Bowl tie with S. M. U. January 1, and Penn, which has 11 wins and a 7-7 tie with Army.

Penn Faces Test

That Penn may be dumped Saturday by Lou Little's high-scoring Columbia aggregation. Army, considered the class of the East after its impressive triumph over Illinois—and it was more impressive than the 26-21 score indicates, should trounce Harvard. And Cornell, which did just that to Harvard, is expected to win easily over its up-State rival, Syracuse.

Notre Dame will be a prohibitive favorite over a Nebraska team that was surprised by Colorado, 19-6.

In the Southern Conference where every opponent is itching to be the one that beats Snavely, North Carolina State well may give North Carolina's tremendous Tar Heels a strenuous argument. State rolled past Davidson, 40-0, and the best pre-game dope was that Davidson could win. State also has a 0-0 game with a Duke team that's stronger than most people think.

Two Fight Programs Set

Kid Gavilan Meets Rossano, Jackson Battles Tim Dawson

Irish Tim Dalton, Midwest scrapper who boasts 38 victories in 40 starts, meets Stonewall Jackson in a lightweight bout next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

In Chicago the experts are calling Dalton one of the hottest boxers to come out of Illinois since the days of Barney Ross and Sammy Mandell.

Dalton was a titlist in the 1943 Golden Glov s tourney in Chicago and went on to win his intercity match against the New York champion.

Most notable of his professional victories are the two decisions he holds over highly regarded Johnny (Honey Boy) B.atton. Monday's bout will be Dalton's first appearance this far east. He has headlined shows in Chicago, Milwaukee, Green Bay, St. Paul and Racine.

Stonewall Jackson, a local boy, will make his first appearance of the indoor season. Jackson has lost only 3 of 30-odd matches.

Gavilan was promised a title fight in December if he made a good showing against Robinson.

It was so good that, although Robinson scored his 48th straight victory, the crowd booed the decision.

In his meteoric rise, the Kid lost only to Doug Ratford and drew with Buster Tyler.

Markson Heads 20th Century

New York, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Harry L. Markson, a genial press agent, was elevated to the top job of the fight game today when Mike Jacobs named him managing director of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club.

Markson, 42, will have charge of the club's promotional activities, and he will act jointly with elderly Sol Strauss, who retains supervision of Twentieth Century legal and financial affairs.

Walters Signs

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 12 (AP).—Fred Walters, playing manager of the Birmingham Barons of the Southern Association, today accepted a one-year contract to manage the Louisville Colonels of the American Association.

Tatum's a Man Of Letters

penses to the tournament and received no remuneration from the proceeds. It was all a contribution to juvenile delinquency. A downpour of rain on the day of the tournament caused many spectators to appear on the scene in order to see how the so-called champions would conduct themselves under conditions such that most any one could use as an excuse not to participate. I was happy to see that not a one of the celebrities failed to go out in the rain and risk his or her health in making the show go on for a good cause."

Tatum didn't originate the idea of writing letters to players, but he has made a few improvements along the line.

Tatum's old coach, Carl Snavely of Carolina, was one of the pioneers and Tatum obviously figures that if letter-writing helped produce victories for Snavely, why shouldn't a Snavely-coached player give it a whirl.

Mrs. Henderson Keeps Her Title At Congressional

Mrs. D. H. Henderson defeated Mrs. N. Crampton 4 and 3 yesterday to keep the Congressional Country Club women's championship she won last year.

In the second-flight finals, Mrs. G. M. Jani won easily over Mrs. David Weir, 7 and 6. Mrs. E. F. Hanson won the third-flight championship, defeating Mrs E. V. Brumfiel 3 and 2, and Mrs. F. R. Dole's 4 and 3 victory over Mrs. R. D. Lockiel gave her the fourth-flight title.

Mrs. Stokes Wins

Honors in the Manor Country Club women's field day went to one of its own yesterday, when Mrs. Walter R. Stokes brought in the low gross score of 39-42-81.

Mrs. Charles Egenroad won low net with her 86-9-77. Other low scores were recorded by Mrs. Alice Sewell, Manor, 101-22-79, Mrs. A. B. Bower, Manor, 82-1-81, Mrs. Betty Meckley, Kenwood, 83-2-81, Mrs. Irma Kintz, Prince Georges, 93-11-82, Mrs. L. G. Pray, Columbia, 87-4-83, and Mrs. Franklin Babcock, Chevy Chase, 98-15-83.

Rockville Wins

Rockville High's booters scored a decisive 6-0 victory over Damascus in a soccer game played yesterday at Rockville.

Bassler, McClellan Medalists in Baltimore Open

Baltimore, Oct. 12 (AP).—Charlie Bassler of Rolling Road and Hugh McClellan, pro at the Army Chemical Center course at Edgewood, shot two-under par 70's at the Green Spring Hunt Club to share medalist honors in the qualifying round for the Baltimore Open Golf championship.

Thirty-one amateurs and pros who shot a 79 or better and Ralph Beach, defending champion who qualified automatically, will start match play tomorrow. The finals will be played Friday.

The qualifying field was dominated by Baltimoreans. Just one Washingtonian, Mel Shorey, from Indian Spring, made the grade. He carded a 72.

Shorey will play Bobby Grove of Frederick, Md., in his first round match.

Charles Price of the Kenwood Club, Washington, turned in a not-quite-low-enough 80 and Eddie Semler of Kenwood failed to turn in a card.

Folk Wins Title

Serge Folk became the Bethesda County Club champion yesterday after defeating J. E. Williams 7 and 6 in an 18-hole fianls match.

Corcoran Shoots 78 to Win District Senior Golf Title

James Corcoran, 57-year-old Washington Golf and Country Club member, shot a 38, 40—78 yesterday at Woodmont Country Club to win the District senior title.

Corcoran was nine over par in winning his second District senior.

John S. Brookes, Burning Tree, and John Miller, Manor, were tied for the second place silver medal with 79s.

Corcoran lost only three strokes to par on the first nine, but foundered on the tenth, eleventh, thirteenth and on the last three holes to go six over on the back nine.

The raw afternoon found 28 entries in the tournament ranging from Young Calvin Black, 55, of Belle Haven to S. B. Maize, 78, of Indian Spring. Maize, the last to finish with his 77-year-old partner, C. N. Goodwin, of Congressional, found the course to his liking, scoring a 94-19-75.

The low net prizes went to Black in the 55 to 60 group for his 85-15—70; to Capt. I. Bogart, Chevy Chase, 82-10—72, and W. C. Brantley, Chevy Chase, 86-14—72, in the 61 to 65 group; and to Walter Tuckerman, Burning Tree, 84-10—74, in the over 65 group.

WEBSTER, FRIEND OF EXECUTIVES

At desk or conference table, many a problem dissolves in the long, thoughtful smoke of a Webster Cigar. Many a customer is welcomed, many a contract celebrated, in the sharing of its fine flavor.

Among executives and professional men Webster is a real favorite. Webster outsells any other brand in the U. S. A. priced at 15c and up.

There are 5 Websters, differing in size, shape, and price, but all are made from the same blend of tobacco. The filler is 100% Long Havana. The binder is top-quality Broadleaf. The wrapper is silky-smooth Connecticut Shadegrown.

Ask for Websters at clubs, good hotels, and tobacco stands that feature quality.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Approximately 11,000 Men of Draft Age In Government Here

DRAFT: There are more draft-age young men in Government here than was estimated. The number is approximately 11,000 men between the ages of 18 and 26. The Federal agencies actually registered 10,602 men for the District Selective Service.

In addition, several hundred others—an unknown number—registered at their home draft boards. Anyway, it's clear that if the draft is speeded up the Government must go out and recruit a sizable number of girls and older men to replace the drafted men.

NOTES: Luther Steward, president of the big and independent National Federation of Federal Employes, has been invited by General MacArthur to go to Japan to make a study of that nation's civil service problems. . . . Donald M. Alstrup is the new assistant commissioner for administration at the Federal Housing Administration. He's another FHA career worker. He succeeds R. Winston Elliott, who will join the Lustron Corp. . . . The father of James Mitchell, the new GOP Civil Service commissioner, is a retired employe of the Government Printing Office.

WAA: You can look for three developments at War Assets Administration. They are: (1) a major reorganization that will wipe out offices, activities, and jobs; (2) the military to take back some of the stuff it had declared to be surplus because of the unpredictable international situation, and (3) for the agency to try to get Congress to allow it to continue as an independent agency instead of going through the present plan to wipe it out the end of February and to transfer a few of its activities to other agencies. Agency officials are convinced that it will take much longer to clean up the surplus problem if WAA is abolished. Their idea makes sense.

FAIR? It didn't take more than a few hours after it was announced for the critics to go after the new Fair Employment Board. Civil Service named the seven members last Thursday. It didn't take long for protests to be made to me about every single one of the appointees.

Nearly all of the complaints were based on pretty and trival information. For example, that one member lived in Virginia and therefore he was biased; that another was an A. F. L. official and some AFL unions discriminate against Negroes, and that the only interest the banker member had in any one was to get his 6 per cent.

There seemed little disposition on the part of the critics to give the new board a fair chance to perform; they were all too willing to judge it on paper and obscure information, a most unreliable formula.

The board was set up in Civil Service to decide cases where discrimination is charged because of race, color or religion. A good many people turned down the jobs because they knew they'd be shot at if they accepted. The least anyone can do is to give the board a chance to function and then judge it on the record.

POSTOFFICE: A story of Communists in the Postoffice Department apparently is about ready to crack wide open.

Out in Cleveland yesterday, D. C. Jernigen, a postal investigator, was quoted as saying that 15 employes of the Postoffice there had been suspended and that they would be charged with perjury. These employes, he said, were suspected of lying when they swore they weren't members of the Communist Party.

Officials in the department here refused comment. However, if my information is correct, there are only 12 or 15 postal employes the country-over who are suspected of being Communists and most of them are in New York. In the Cleveland Postoffice, I'm told, are only one or two suspects. But I'll be the first to admit that Jernigen should know what he's talking about. We'll have to wait and see.

NOTES: Dr. S. L. Emsweller of Agriculture's Bureau of Plant Industry has been awarded the Leonard H. Vaughan Memorial Award of $500 for his paper on his work with Easter lilies. The new lilies developed by the scientist are much larger and they have thicker petals . . . James G. Yaden, the new president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes, will be given a testimonial dinner on October 25 by his friends and union associates.

Court to Rule On 'Pressure' in Pupil Fare Case

Board Election

P-TA Group Offers New School Bill

Montgomery County voters would decide the issue of elected or appointed school board members under legislation proposed yesterday by the County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations.

Presently, school board members are appointed by the Governor. The County Council of P-TA's long has advocated their popular election.

President Nathan R. Gilbert of the council, announced yesterday the group has submitted for approval to its 35 affiliated P-TA groups a draft of a bill proposed for enactment by the Maryland General Assembly when it convenes in January.

The bill provides for a referendum on the question in the 1950 general election.

If the electorate should approve, a special nonpartisan election would be held in December, 1950, for one additional member of the school board, raising the board's membership to seven. The six present members of the school board would serve out their full terms, with two new members being elected on nonpartisan ballots every two years at general elections.

Terms of office, now seven years, would be cut to four years, and at least on board member would be an upper county resident.

17% of Pupils Need Special Training

An unofficial sampling in Montgomery County indicates nearly 17 per cent of the pupils need special training.

Mrs. Margaret E. Nolte, chairman of the Committee on Unmet Needs of Exceptional Children, yesterday cited this figure in a report to the Montgomery County board of education.

Nearly 10 per cent of the children have problems of mental and emotional health and need psychiatric help or special guidance, she said.

Nearly 2 per cent of the children have serious speech defects while 4.9 per cent have reading difficulties.

One half of 1 per cent were found to be so mentally retarded as to be in need of institutional care or special educational facilities.

Sixteen white schools with an enrollment of 6500 students and four Negro schools with 790 pupils participated in the study conducted by the committee, a division of the Eastern Suburban Study Group. The schools are in Takoma Park, Silver Spring, Wheaton and Kensington.

15,000 Questionnaires

The 15,000 questionnaires distributed to homes brought back replies showing 46 children not attending a regular school because of physical or mental handicaps.

The school board referred the study to Assistant School Superintendent Edgar M. Douglass to report on what special facilities can be made available to these children.

Approved by the board was a $178,252 bid by the B. Z. Harding Construction Co. of Gaithersburg for a gymnasium at Montgomery Hills Junior High School, and a bid of $4942 by the Cyclone Fence Co. to fence in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School athletic field.

Injunction Asked By CTC Against PSC Order Giving Zone Rate Effect

Maryland's Court of Appeals yesterday was asked to decide if Capital Transit Co. was illegally "high-pressured" into 3-cent zone fare rates for school children in near-by Maryland.

This dispute, nearly a year old, stems from a Maryland Public Service Commission order authorizing increase of adult fares to five cents for each 1½ mile zone in Montgomery and Prince George Counties—provided the company agreed to the 3-cent rate for school children.

Capital Transit instituted both Maryland rates in June, pending litigation over the school rate for streetcar and bus service.

The District's fare rate for school children—a flat three-cent—also came in for indirect criticism in the dispute, with the CTC comment that it is "inadequate." Capital Transit, which recently won a rate increase in other fares here, however, declined last night to state whether any action is contemplated on District school children fares.

At the hearing in Annapolis, Capital Transit asked the court to grant a permanent injunction against the Maryland PSC orders. Such action, in effect, would permit a general 5-cent rate for everyone.

Even at the flat 5-cent rate, the company said, it was prepared to lose about $188,000 a year on its Maryland operations, since these routes serve as "feeders" into more profitable District lines.

PSC lawyers, urging the court to uphold the PSC decrees, declared that "education of children is of primary economic importance" and that "reasonable impositions to provide for the education of its citizens by a State is permissible."

Chief Judge Ogle Marbury asked CTC counsel if the PSC order "appears to be a pressure move to require you to adjust your school fares."

Clarence W. Miles, CTC attorney, termed the set of orders "one of the most amazing documents that I've ever known to be penned by an administrative body." CTC said the commission had "acted arbitrarily, capriciously and unreasonably," in requiring the school rate.

Miles later referred to a letter written April 27 to the PSC by E. D. Merrill, Capital Transit president, in which Merrill had called District transit rates for school children unfair.

In that letter, to counter claims that the District three-cent rate is a basis for a similar rate in Maryland, Merrill wrote:

"The company's experience with school children loads during the peaks of rush hours in the District of Columbia demonstrate that the special school fare in the District is inequitable."

E. Cleveland Giddings, CTC vice president, said last night that 8,500,000 school fares were collected in the District last year. Books of 100 fare tickets are sold for $3 to qualified school children up to high school age, including summer and evening school students.

Giddings said a change in the school fare here would require Congressional legislation, because the 3-cent fare is specified in legislation creating the Capital Transit Co. in 1933.

Chief Judge Marbury, in the Maryland case, said the "difficulty" in CTC cases there is that "you have no coordination between regulatory bodies in Maryland and regulatory bodies in the District of Columbia."

There was no indication when the court will file its verdict.

Another area school fare case is now under way in Arlington, where the A., B & W Transit Co. is negotiating with the school board for subsidy payments representing a 2½-cent increase over the 5-cent rates on 7 of 18 special bus lines.

A., B. & W. said rates on 8 of the 18 special buses will remain at five cents—same as the school rate on regular bus lines—while subsidy arrangements for the remaining three lines have already been made.

The seven lines still under debate run to the Washington-Lee High School.

D. C. Parking Expert Inspects Shopping Area In Philadelphia With Space for 500 Cars

ROOFTOP PARKING—One of Philadelphia's answers in solving the auto parking problem there is the Girard Center, on Chestnut st., between 11th and 12th sts. The third and fourth floors and the roof have a capacity of 500 cars. Thousands of cars are handled daily

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.—This city's "piano row" is no more. In its place is a block-long, half-block wide, up-to-the-minute shopping area topped by three floors of parking space in the same building.

The structure, considered one of the finest of its kind in the country, was carefully studied today by Charles T. Garin, Washington's motor vehicle parking agency expert, who is checking parking fees and service in four cities.

For many years, the shopping area in the vicinity of the structure located on Chestnut st. between 11th and 12th sts. had been going downhill in appearance and business. In 1940, the board of city trusts, a municipal agency responsible for the administration of the Stephen Girard estate, began to consider ways of improving revenue from the tract.

Real Estate Broker's Proposal

At this point, Frank G. Binswanger, enterprising real estate broker who has been specializing in lining up locations for chain store outlets, made the bold proposal for erection of Girard Center—a four story building with a reinforced roof which would provide store facilities as well as a self-contained parking area. The fund required would be drawn from the estate capital, not public treasury.

The Ballinger Co., a New York and Philadelphia firm of architects and the engineers, prepared the plans for the building and in March, 1941, it was opened. Parking facilities were offered on the third and fourth floors, as well as open-air space on the roof—in all, room for 500 cars at one time.

Where obsolete buildings had stood, frequently showing "for rent" signs, bright, gleaming store fronts with interiors to match were opened. The parking facility, operated by a private firm on a leasing arrangement began to handle from 1000 to 1200 cars a day. Business began to perk up.

The parking facility employs 24 persons, including nine drivers, who pick up and deliver vehicles after passengers disembark at an interior platform. The drivers use a high speed elevator in ascending to pick up parked cars and a fire pole to descend after parking vehicles.

Rates are 65 cents for three hours; 75 cents for 12 hours and five cents for each additional hour. Lubrication, washing and polishing and gasoline sales services are offered.

Parkers may enter from either 11th or 12th st. and may designate which exit they want their car brought to. The reason for this policy is that both streets are one-way thoroughfares and designating a street saves the motorist time, John Hinkle, day manager, explained today.

Since the opening of the $1,250,000 white brick building, a general face-lifting has taken place in the area.

The story of how the area, once known only for its aged piano sales rooms, recovered was told to McGavin and this reporter by Binswanger, an enthusiastic man who believes implicitly that private enterprise can solve the parking problem in most cities.

Binswanger, whose brain-child has been studied by parking experts from all parts of the country, is not finished with the parking problem. Here are some more of his recommendations:

1. Fringe parking, just as has been started in Washington. He said these would become more and more attractive to workers and shoppers as heavy traffic flow slowed travel to town and mass transportation improved in quantity and speed.

2. Erect permanent parking facilities in the downtown area. "The complete decay of the big city's shopping section will not happen. Women will want to come in the shop—it's in their blood. They want better selection than they can get in the suburbs."

Besides advocating erection of more underground and ground above parking structures, Binswanger showed plans for incorporating parking facilities with office buildings, stores and even industrial plants. "Providing parking is just as essential to a modern building as air conditioning or a fancy front," he declared.

The real estate man outlined plans for a 10-story office building whose occupants would pay an office rental with parking space included.

McGavin said that Morris Cafritz, prominent Washington builder, has announced plans for such a building in the block at 16th and I sts. nw. A garage is planned for the center of the structure, topped on each floor by parking space connected by ramps. An office renter will park his car, then enter his office on the same floor. Automatic fire doors are planned to separate the parking from the office area in case of fire, McGavin said.

Herbert M. Backer, acting chairman of the Philadelphia Zoning Board of Adjustment, already is on record as advocating that businessmen "interested in parking should erect garage-type facilities which would not only handle more cars (than open-air lots), but also provide an adequate tax source to the city.

McGavin, who is planning a two-day study of this city of two million, has begun a firsthand check of downtown parking lots and garages. He is studying first the area in the Chestnut st. axis, which includes the parking "generators," mass population attractors creating parking headaches.

More Shoppers Using Fringe Parking Lots

Washington's two fringe parking lots are getting more of a workout from District shoppers than when the system was started on September 29.

This was learned yesterday from officials of the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, who report an increase of more than five times in use of the lots since the opening day. Most of the fringe parkers, who ride Capital Transit Co. shuttle buses from the lots to downtown stores, are using the Municipal Center lot, rather than the Kass-Heurich lot at 25th and E sts. nw. Daily average of caruse for both lots now stand at 270, compared with an opening-day figure of 55.

License Increase Is Approved for All Rental Rooms

D. C. Commissioners Adopt New Scale Expected to Yield $357,759 in Fees

All public housing accommodations in Washington will have their fees for licenses and inspection increased under a new scale approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The new scale, which Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton J. Korman estimates will bring the District about $357,759, was proposed by a Special Public Housing Committee, and becomes effective November 1.

At the same time the Commissioners yesterday extended the life of the committee, of which Korman is chairman, for another two years, and enlarged it to include a representative from both the Police and Fire Departments.

The new fees affect all hotels, apartments, lodging, rooming and boarding-houses, convalescent and nursing homes. Present fees charged have been netting only $187,441. The new fees are expected to meet the cost of inspections and licensing.

Sample increases under the new scale are the raise from $15 to $25 a year for buildings with up to 10 roomers, from $18 to $50 for hotels with 10 rooms or less. Hotels having more than 10 rooms and one kitchen will be charged $50 for the first 10 rooms and kitchen, $25 for each additional kitchen and $2 for each additional room.

Women Hear 4 Arlington Candidates

Four candidates for a November vacancy in the Arlington County Board outlined their political views last night before members of the Arlington County League of Women Voters.

Alfred E. Frisbie, Democratic nominee, whose term expires in November, said he would not make a "political football" out of the proposed school bond issue, but favored economy in county spending, and suggested an organized campaign to buy in Arlington County as a way to increase revenues.

Lee Potter, Arlington builder and Republican independent, advocated a 12-point platform which included more equitable distribution of tax burden, development of recreational facilities, and immediate establishment of a merit system for county employes. He also favored support of the school improvement program.

Jacob C. Bechtel, Arlington carpenter and candidate for the school board last year, opposed the school bond issue on the grounds that many of the advocates of the plan were temporary dwellers who would soon quit the area, leaving the financial burden on the permanent residents.

Francis J. Blair, Republican independent, cited his past civic record, as qualification for the vacancy in the board, and promised to work in behalf of Arlington residents' problems.

Following the candidates speeches State Senator Charles R. Feenwick, in a debate with Oscar R. Le Beau, former chairman of the Citizens' Committee for School Improvement, urged that the election date for school board be changed from November to May.

The meeting was held in the Ashton Heights Women's Club, 413 N. Irving st., Arlington.

Congress Aid Sought For Invalided Girl

The Thomas Circle Citizens Association last night asked the District Commissioners to seek congressional aid for Dorothy Kilmer, 20-year-old District girl, invalided by a policeman's bullet.

Miss Kilmer was shot accidentally July 29 at the Palm Grove Club, 1604 14th st. nw., by an off-duty rookie policeman. Doctors say she may never again walk as result of the injury.

The citizens association met at 1536 16th st. nw.

UCS Lays Plans

Public Asked To Increase Play Interest

Greater public participation in the District's recreational program was urged by several speakers yesterday at the initial meeting of the United Community Services recreation section.

More than 150 representatives from 50 UCS agencies, conferring at the Jewish Community Center, 1529 16th st. nw., also heard plea for heightened cooperation between public and private agencies interested in recreation work.

Citizen Participation

Jack Houlihan, retiring secretary of the recreation section, emphasized that citizen participation is essential in a good recreation program and proposed that it be expanded here. He suggested a program to train citizen volunteers. He also proposed development of a church recreation committee and recreation program for civilian hospitals.

Houlihan will become assistant director of the Louisville, Ky., Community Chest Monday.

Another principal speaker was Arthur H. Kruse, executive director of UCS, which was created to succeed the old Council of Social Agencies and the Community Chest.

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the District Recreation Board, called the District financial picture "deplorable" and pointed out that this increases the need for greater cooperation between the agencies—through the recreation section of UCS.

Red Feather Report

Meanwhile, canvassing the current Red Feather drive for $4,567,796 continued. The Chest is the fund-raising organ of UCS, providing operating funds for some of its member organizations.

The Office of the Chief of Engineers, Corps of Engineers, Gravelly Point, went over the top officials announced in an initial report to the Department of the Army. Lieut. Gen. R. A. Wheeler, Chief of Engineers, reported receipt of contributions totaling $29,375.91, or 114.3 per cent of the 1949 quota.

The second report meeting of the current campaign will be held Thursday at 12:30 p. m. in Hotel Washington, with Dr. James A. Gannon, member of the D. C. Recreation Board, as principal speaker.

Officials reported that some 1600 area doctors have been notified in letters from Dr. John Minor, president of the District Medical Society, that fewer than 300 contributions to the Red Feather drive were made by members and their employes last year. He urged greater participation.

Yesterday some 40 students from Woodrow Wilson High School toured several Red Feather agencies to learn how Chest-collected dollars are spent.

Fumes Gone, School Opens Again Today

Oak Street School in Falls Church, closed Monday and yesterday because of fumes from a 100-ton smoldering coal pile, will open today at 9 a. m. The smoldering coal had been removed from the building by early yesterday.

Miss Audrey Snodgrass, the principal, said emergency crews of Falls Church firemen, city water department workers and State highway department employes worked all Monday night to remove the coal.

Firemen said they believed the smoldering coal started from spontaneous combustion.

Gypsy Jinx Expert Hexed by $75 Fine

Princess Theresa S. Ely's gypsy jinx-remover could not erase a $75 fine against her yesterday in Municipal Court.

The princess was charged with unlicensed fortune telling. The charges were lodged against her after she, her jinx-removing and Policewoman Audrey Farr became involved October 1.

According to Mrs. Farr, the 28-year-old fortune teller and mother of a 4-year-old son attempted to tell her fortune when she visited the princess' emporium at 2131 Georgia ave. nw.

The princess, the policewoman related, talked about jinxes, and finally told her that if she would bring an egg wrapped in a $20 bill the secret of how to dispel a jinx another woman had over her marriage would be hers.

As she paid the fine, the princess was indignant. She suggested to reporters that if they wanted to see the jinx remover work, they might come around and have their fortunes told. But she didn't care for Judge Nadine Gallagher.

"It should have been only $25. Seventy-five dollars is too much fine," she said.

$500 Award Affirmed

The Municipal Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed a jury award of $500 to a 12-year-old girl who fell through a trapdoor in the sidewalk.

The girl, Joan Robinson, 2220 Virginia ave. nw., testified that she was holding a 1-year-old infant in her arms and fell through a "dilapidated trapdoor" in front of 2240 Virginia ave. nw.

Joan, according to testimony, held onto the infant, saving it from injury, but suffered a badly cut leg.

The defendants were Mrs. Eva Gittleson, owner of the 2240 Virginia ave. property, and her tenant, Clarence Tate.

Md. U.'s Terrapin Seen

Testudo, the University of Maryland's 500-pound bronze terrapin, really is getting around these days. Or else people are seeing things.

Testudo, which has graced the entrance to the university's Coliseum off and on for a dozen years, recently was reported in Reno, Nev.—or so stated an anonymously written postcard.

Now comes word to Publicity Director George Carroll that Testudo has made his way to Jacksonville, Fla.

Carroll said he believes the wayward terp will "return" home during one of Maryland's grid battles. The hefty terrapin has been missing since the start of the football season.

Tax Deadline Extended

Due to mechanical difficulties encountered in the mailing out of some 50,000 Montgomery County tax bills, deadline for payment was extended yesterday by the county commissioners from December 1 until January 1.

In requesting the action, County Treasurer John B. Diamond said he hoped all tax bills would be mailed out by December 1 with taxpayers enjoying a 30-day reprieve.

Normally, a one-half of 1 per cent interest rate per month is collected for taxes not paid by October 1. Recent change-over to business machinery in county offices was explained as the reason for the delay.

60 Days for Assault

A 60-day jail term was given yesterday to Dallas C. Williford, 39, of 2401 22d st. ne., for assaulting two policemen.

Police Pvts. Thomas Souder and Cecil Castle said that when they came to Williford's residence in response to a complaint of a disorderly man, he charged at them. Williford testied that Souder had arrested him previously on a sex charge of which he was found innocent.

Compensation Costly

George E. Jones, 48, a cement worker, pleaded guilty in Municipal Court yesterday to eight charges of accepting unemployment compensation without right. The total amount was $142. The case was referred to the probation office for presentence report.

'Insignificant'

Fr. Sheerin Minimizes Kinsey Book

The Rev. John B. Sheerin, C. S. P., editor of The Catholic World, last night found a word to describe the much-discussed Kinsey Report — "insignificant."

For certain interpretations of the report which call for change in the moral code of Christianity, he had another term—"dangerous."

Speaking before more than 100 persons at the first of a series of panel and debate forums sponsored by the Catholic Daughters of America, Father Sheerin declared the report—"Sexual Behavior in the Human Male"—was "incomplete" and "quite inadequate."

Declared Not Typical

He said that although the Catholic Church has no official attitude on the report, and probably never will, theolgians and churchmen believe that Kinsey's study of some 500 American men is not typical of all the men in the world.

"The figures in this poll," Father Sheerin declared, "are figures and nothing more."

He reviewed Kinsey's findings briefly: 85 per cent of the 5000 men had premarital sexual experience; 30 per cent were found to have had extra marital experience; three per cent were confirmed homosexuals and 37 per cent had had homosexual experience.

Speaker's Conclusions

To these findings—and to interpreters who argue they call for a change in the moral code—he directed these statements:

1. The indicated prevalence of sexual misbehavior does not prove the misbehavior is normal.

2. Sexual abuses, "if they do exist on such a large scale," are not caused so much by heredity as by environment." And, he added, "the environment in which we live is quite pagan."

"The danger in the Kinsey report," he said, "comes from certain interpreters of the study." They base their demand for refrom on the moral code, he said, by deciding the report shows the code does not conform to actual behavior.

"If there is gross immorality surrounding us, we must be vigilant lest it overcome us," Father Sheerin said. "The Catholic Church can never change its moral code," he concluded.

The meeting was held at No. 2 Scott circle nw.

J. P. Kirby, Sr., Dies of Rare Spinal Disease

James P. Kirby, sr., 56, veteran newspaperman, press relations adviser and criminologist, died Monday night at Georgetown University Hospital of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a rare spinal disease.

Mr. Kirby

A native of Brooklyn, N. Y., Mr. Kirby started newspaper work on the Brooklyn Eagle after completing his schooling at St. Francis Xavier College in Brooklyn.

After years of service with the New York Evening Journal, the New York News, the Detroit Free Press and the Cleveland Plain Dealer, he was named chief probation officer of Cleveland Criminal Courts.

Mr. Kirby wrote a textbook on criminology and was a contributor to a number of legal journals.

Mr. Kirby was appointed director of information and press relations for the Office of Civilian Defense here in 1941. Later he became associated with the Army Times.

He was a member of the Knights of Columbus in Cleveland and of the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament Parish here.

Requiem mass for Mr. Kirby will be said Friday at 9:30 a. m. at the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament, Western ave. and Quesada st. nw. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The body may be viewed today and Thursday at the Reuben Pumphrey funeral home, 7557 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, Md.

Besides his wife, who lives at 5721 Moreland st. nw., Mr. Kirby is survived by five sons, James Kirby, jr., of San Diego, Calif.; Richard Kirby, now with ECA in Paris; Robert Kirby, John Kirby and Jerome Kirby of Washington, and two daughters, Maryalice and Juneann Kirby, also of Washington.

Cold, Calculating Sins Attacked

The "cold, calculating" sins of hypocrisy, greed, selfishness and covetousness were attacked last night by Dr. J. M. Dawson, executive secretary of the Joint Baptist Conference on Public Relations.

Dr. Dawson spoke at Temple Baptist Church, 10th and N sts. nw., in connection with the city-wide Baptist evangelistic campaign now in progress. The drive is being conducted under the auspices of the Missions Department of the D. C. Baptist Convention.

"While Christ condemned such damning and warm-blooded sins as drinking and prostitution, he was more severe with the cold calculating sins of covetousness, hypocrisy, greed and selfishness," Dr. Dawson asserted.

$800 for Hicks Family

Greenbelt, Md., neighbors have raised more than $800 in a fund for the family of James C. Hicks, 26, who accidentally shot himself last Thursday at his home in Greenbelt. He died five hours later.

Hicks left a wife and three small children. The townfolk have designated Mrs. Thomas Callanan, of 2-C Laurel rd. Greenbelt, as fund collection chairman

Rites Held For Countess De Benque, 84

The Countess Grace Dutar de Benque, 84, who was convicted of larceny in a "hush money" case here in 1933, was buried yesterday in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Only a handful of faithful friends attended the funeral services for the countess, who was once a lavish hostess to Washington society, but who died alone and almost penniless at St. Elizabeths Hospital Friday.

The services were conducted at the Saffell funeral home, 475 H st. n.w., by the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde.

"I can remember when her many so-called friends flocked to her beautiful home on Wyoming ave. to drink her champagne. But they all forgot her when she was sent to prison and they refused to speak to her when she was finally paroled and returned to Washington to live again," he remarked last night.

The countess was convicted, along with George Gormley, of stealing $5000 from Miss Louise Maret, coproprietor of the fashionable Maret School for Girls.

The Countess de Benque was paroled in 1936 after serving three years at Lorton Reformatory.

Returning to Washington, she lived meagerly on small insurance payments and on money from the sale of a remaining few of the many furs and other valuables that she once had owned, the Rev. Mr. MacBryde said.

She entered St. Elizabeth's Hospital a little more than a year ago.

Little is known about her background. She was born in Peekskill, N. Y. She was believed to have been married and widowed one or more times before her marriage in 1917 to John Joseph Felix Dutar de Benque, known as a French count, who died in 1942.

During her years as a Washington society leader, she and her husband lived in a home in the 2400 block of Wyoming ave. nw.

J. P. McNally Death Ruled Accidental

A certificate of accidental death was issued yesterday for James F. McNally, 39, a Washington Terminal brakeman, who was found dead in his bed Monday a few hours after he had returned from work.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who performed the autopsy, said death was due to a fractured skull caused by a fall. Friends of Mr. McNally, who brought him home early Monday, said the accident occurred at a service station when Mr. McNally, reaching in his pocket for money to pay for the gas, fell out of the car.

Mr. McNally is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lavinia H. McNally, and two children with whom he lived at 3654 Warder st. nw.; a brother, William McNally, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Sommers, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 8:30 a. m. in the Hanlon funeral home, 3831 Georgia ave. nw. Mass will be said at 9 a. m. at St. Gabriel's Church, Grant Circle. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mary Eaton

Hollywood, Oct. 12 (AP).—Funeral services will be held Thursday for Mary Eaton, New York musical comedy star of the twenties who died Sunday.

The 46-year-old actress was starred in Ziegfeld Follies from 1923 to 1930. She costarred with Eddie Cantor in "Kid Boots."

Grandma would Sympathize-

(She didn't have a Steel Refrigerator either)

Today twenty million American families are enjoying the ease and benefits of modern refrigerators made of steel. Father, Mother and the children have a wider variety of foods to choose from — health-building foods kept fresh all year 'round.

Last year from their greatest peace-time production in history, America's steel mills provided the steel to make 5,000,000 new refrigerators — along with steel for everything else. And this year the mills are turning out even more steel than in 1947.

For You — dependable refrigeration year in and year out.

For Steel Workers — many thousands of jobs at good wages.

For Everybody — health and progress.

IN THE NEWS... America's steel companies have kept down prices. While the average wholesale price of basic commodities has increased about 118 per cent since 1939, the average price of steel has gone up only 62 per cent.

IN THE NEWS... Last year steel companies earned an average of 6.3 cents on the sales dollar — a lot less than people believe is fair. Most people think a fair profit would be 10 cents or more.

Cornerstone Ceremony Held

Spanish Embassy Party Marks Columbus Day

By Marie McNair

THE UNITED STATES and Spain joined hands yesterday to celebrate Columbus Day.

At the Spanish Embassy the great adventurer's discovery was marked by a reception by the Charge d'Affaires of Spain and Senora de Baraibar, and before that representatives of the 1 and 20 American Republics had watched the cornerstone of the Pan American Union annex being laid in its place.

Senora de Baraibar, just back from four months in Spain, had spent a cool summer—too cool for comfort—but she looked exceedingly well and handsome in a dull black crepe gown, the skirt of fine pleats from the hips to her slender ankles.

The Spanish Embassy soon filled up, guests gathering at the bar in the tiled patio where a tiny pool is surrounded by greenery, and the dining room for a supper of baked ham and turkey, and delicious vegetable salad reeking in fresh Spanish olive oil.

Before the evening was over Senor Baraibar introduced a young compatriot—Antonio Iglesias, a distinguished pianist, who enchanted us all with a program by Spanish composers.

Daughter Attends

Youngest guest at the party was Senor and Senora's daughter, Alicia, who's only 10; who's a fresh cheeked youngster with her fair hair hanging in waist-length braids. Smartest dressed at the party? It would be difficult to say for there were dozens of women in new season frocks and hats.

There was lovely Gladys Heurtematte, wife of Julio Heurtematte, Commercial Counselor of the Panama Embassy, in a full skirted black lace gown, and a black paradise in her corn colored hair. There was Mrs. Morris Cafritz wearing a Paris hat—a close black velvet turban with paradise feathers at crossed swords angle. And there was Mrs. Arthur M. Hill, in the new tobacco brown taffeta, rustling by, and on her head a round velvet bonnet in one of the new wine shades.

Saw Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran Ambassador, and noted that the feathers on her green hat matched the green of her dotted taffeta gown. Senora de Dillon, wife of the Ecuador Ambassador, wore rippling black with a tiny hat, and Anita Burke, with her husband Tom, was also in plain black with fascinating dull jet jewelry and shining coque feathers on her equally shining black hair.

Black Favored

Yes, it's still black for the best dressed. Mrs. Eldridge Jordan had her favorite white carnations fastened to her black wrap. With her was the Marquess de Zahara, who was Betty Byrnes of Washington and who is the widow of the former Counselor of the Spanish Embassy here. Pretty as ever, she's to end her visit to Mrs. Jordan in a few days, sail for France, spend Christmas in England and then go on to Spain.

Others there were Ray Muir of the State Department, and Mrs. Muir; Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, easily spotted in any room, wrapped in a sable jacket; former Senator Burton K. Wheeler and his daughter, Marion Wheeler, who was with him in Europe this summer and paid a visit to Spain; the Irish Minister and Mrs. Sean Nunan; Capt. and Mrs. Robert A. Dyer and their daughter, Dorothy; the Charge d'Affaires of Cuba and Senora de Baron; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy, Col. Wendell G. Johnson, former United States Military Attache to the embassy in Spain., wearing a miniature of Spanish decoration in his buttonhole; Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Curt Schiffeler, Mrs. George Bestermann, Oscar Albertini, Mrs. James L. Houghteling.

Then there were the three bachelor Ambassadors—Juan Felix Morales of Paraguay; Mauricio Nabuco of Brazil and Jeronimo Remorino, who hails from the Argentine.

THE POLISH Ambassador and Mme. Winiewicz entertained at luncheon yesterday at the embassy in honor of the Polish Minister to Canada and Mme. Milnikiel who are visiting them for several days. Ranking guests at the luncheon were the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong.

Others included Fred Solter of the State Department and Leon Barankski, Director of the International Bank.

Luncheon Forum Held

Women's Committee for Peace Hears ECA Progress Report

PSYCHOLOGICALLY, the Marshall Plan has been the most important event for Europe since the peace.

That was the consensus of three ECA experts who spoke yesterday at the United Nations Club on the occasion of a luncheon-forum which opened the season's activities of the Women's Action Committee for Lasting Peace. They were Gordon Huson, economic specialist of the British Embassy Office of Information; Jean Louis Manderau, chief of the French Supply Mission; and William Westlake, chief of press for ECA. Subject under discussion was "What has the Marshall Plan Accomplished to Date?"

Mr. Huson and Mr. Mandereau, speaking on what the economic aid program has mean to their respective countries, stressed the tremendous part it has played in bringing new hope and faith among both the peoples and their governments.

"The greatest merit of the plan is not the amount of money involved, but the occasion it has given the countries of Europe to organize and work together," Mr. Mandereau said in discussing the European Organization for Economic Cooperation. Made up of the 16 participating nations, the EOEC has proved the medium by which countries may come together to discuss mutual aid for all. The results of their meetings have taken the form of a formal report to ECA, stating each nation's needs.

"Such meetings which took place this summer are historic," declared Mr. Westlake. "They have proven that the countries of Europe have a will to cooperate, to recognize the economic ills and needs of a neighboring people. If the Marshall Plan accomplished only this, it would have proved itself as a potent factor in furthering world peace and security."

Mr. Huson pointed out that it was difficult to trace the actual course of wheat from an American farm to the mouth of a hungry child in Europe. Americans, he feels, will lose sight of the true results of their generosity if they look only for practical statistics.

"Remember that it has meant freedom from fear and want, and made life happier in Britain," he said.

"Had it not been for the ladder pushed out by the United States to a drowning Europe we would not have survived," he said. "But we are not entirely self-sufficient yet. If you want a lasting peace it is up to you to see that the ladder is not taken away too soon."

Mr. Mandereau said that his country had so improved its economic condition in the last year that it was hoped that funds from the ECA could be used entirely to finance imports of American equipment this year. A year ago, he pointed out, it would have been necessary to use it for bread rations.

"You must not believe that the Frenchman does not realize the import of what you in America are doing for him," said Mr. Mandereau. "My countrymen can be compared to the thrifty Scots. And when he learns that every American, man, woman and child, has donated $35 to help him—believe me, he is impressed."

Service Set Wives Open Fall Programs

THE WEST POINT Wives Club of January, 1943, met at the Water Gate Inn for luncheon and bridge yesterday. Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. John J. Gorman and Mrs. Walter W. Hogrefe.

Those attending were Mrs. Donald A. Stroh, honorary member; Mrs. Edward L. Sheley, Mrs. Richard T. Schlossberg, jr., Mrs. Barton K. Yount, Mrs. McGlachlin Hatch, Mrs. Albert L. Lane, Mrs. Donald W. Thompson, Mrs. Jack J. Jones, Mrs. David H. Barger, Mrs. Robert S. Beightler, jr., and Mrs. Walter H. Cook, jr.

The Air Force Officers' Wives Club of Washington, D. C., will hold its first meeting of the season at 1:30 this afternoon at the Bolling Field Officers' Club.

The meeting will feature Col. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton, Chief of the United States Air Force Policy Division, as guest speaker. Colonel Hamilton will speak on the "United Nations," relating his talk to a better understanding of the world situation by Air Force wives. Following the program, tea will be served.

All Air Force wives, in or around Washington, are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Reception for Hiestons

Mr. and Mrs. Louis P. Hieston will be guests of honor at a reception on Friday evening at 8 p. m., to be given by a group of their friends at Dumbarton Methodist Church in celebration of their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Speaking From Painful Personal Experience In Taming Husband's Allegedly Ungovernable Temper, Wife Calls Martyred Patience Futile

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your evaluation of the problem discussed September 16 was astoundingly accurate, as I know from experience.

In our first years of marriage my husband posed the same paradox: a presumably ungovernable temper coupled with an otherwise fine character. For six years I reacted in much the same manner as the wife in this case. I kept hoping my patience and love for him would equalize his disposition.

There was nobody in either family to give intelligent aid, if confided in, and I couldn't bring myself to discuss the situation with outsiders. Everyone thought our marriage ideal and believed we were completely happy together.

Four years after marriage our first child was born and I hoped this would steady Burke. Had I known then what you so clearly expound, I would have foreseen that a baby in the home would make matters worse, as indeed it did.

Burke's outbursts, previously directed at pieces of furniture or some specially cherished belonging of mine, now were focused on me; although (as in the case of the lady who asked your advice) he would always be instantly remorseful and expect my forgiveness.

Violent Scene Turned Tables

AFTER A YEAR of such intensified tantrums, the climax arrived when, out of a clear sky, he tried to choke me. I was terrified and became so hysterical that the services of a doctor were required to calm me. The doctor, who had known my husband's family for years, asked me to confide in him the cause of my anguish, when I felt I could.

For several days I wouldn't permit Burke to enter my room, and in that period I reached a decision to leave him. Dearly as I loved him, I now felt he could never change and I feared for my very life.

I visited the doctor and belatedly poured out my story. His diagnosis was essentially yours. He said, "If you had acted from the first with the firmness you are showing now, you could have helped your husband. Make no mistake, he can control himself. You blamed his outbursts on nervous fatigue, on working too hard, on a drink too many, but never on himself. No sane man has an 'ungovernable' temper. If he wants to, he can control himself."

Wife's Cold Rage Broke Man's Spirit

I WENT AWAY for some weeks, and as I reviewed my years with Burke, I saw the justice of the doctor's verdict, which exposed weakness in both of us. Burke begged me to return. I told him my love had died completely and that if I did return it would be with the understanding that we did not live as man and wife.

He was broken in spirit as I had never seen him and he promised that time would prove he had learned his lesson. That was 12 years ago and he has never had a tantrum since. Our marriage is as ideal as our friends thought at first; but it took me four years to overcome an involuntary aversion to his touch, and even now tragic memories of his earlier rages rise to the surface of consciousness occasionally.

Yet how simple it would have been, indeed how easy it was, to halt the whole senseless proceeding; and how needless was our suffering! Therefore I say with you: Stop it now, without delay.

Wife Must Learn to Truly Forgive

DEAR A. L.: As I get the picture, you conquered Burke by stealing his thunder. Given the choking episode to hang over his head, you threw a tantrum that lasted for weeks, indeed for years, in lingering overtones. He has been the underdog and you the tyrant in the situation ever since.

Now that he is behaving so nicely, chastened to the bone, perennially striving to atone for his guilt, may I suggest that it seems only fair for you to work redemptively on your own subtle sin of essentially unforgiving self-righteousness, which is keeping alive those resurgent "tragic memories" that still cause pain.

Ice Can Be Beautiful

Ice cubes frozen around cherries, mint leaves, lemon slices, or even small flowers make a tall, frosty glass of your favorite cold beverage look even more inviting. To make the cubes, homemaking specialists fill the ice tray half full of water and place in the freezing compartment. When the water has frozen partially, place garnishes in the cube compartments, fill tray with water and freeze.

Old Fashioned Favorite

By Lucia Brown

ALONG about now is the time thoughts begin to turn to such heart-warming foods as old-fashioned "Peach Upside-Down Cake." Here's a delicious recipe for it—a 2-egg cake batter which thriftily uses evaporated milk and is poured over plump cling peach halves, cherries, butter and brown sugar.

PEACH UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE

9 canned cling peach halves
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ cup brown sugar (packed)
Maraschino cherries

½ cup shortening
1 cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup evaporated milk
1/3 cup water
Whipped evaporated milk or cream

Drain peaches. Blend butter and brown sugar and spread evenly in bottom of deep 9-inch square pan. Arrange peaches and cherries in attractive pattern on butter-sugar mixture.

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, creaming thoroughly. Blend in well-beaten eggs and flavoring. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Add to creamed mixture alternately with milk and water. Pour carefully over fruit. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about 45 minutes. Loosen sides of cake with spatula and turn out of pan immediately. Serve warm or cold with whipped evaporated milk or cream. This recipe serves nine.

It's Cranberry Jelly Time

Cranberries, now coming on the market from this fall's near-record crop, are excellent for jelly because they are tart, rich in pectin and bright in color. It takes less sugar in proportion to fruit juice and less cooking to make jelly from cranberries than from most other fruits.

For those homemakers who want to put up homemade jelly for Christmas gifts or home consumption while fresh berries are plentiful this fall, home economists of the United States Department of Agriculture offer the following recipe: Ingredients: 1 quart (1 pound) of cranberries; 1½ cups water; 2 cups sugar. To make—pick over berries, discarding the withered, soft or damaged. Cook berries and water rapidly in a covered saucepan about 15 minutes or until berries are soft. Strain through a fine sieve, add sugar, stir and cook about 3 minutes, or until the liquid gives the two-drop test from a spoon. Pour into jelly glasses. When cool and set, seal with paraffin.

Maryland Families Work To Restore Ghost Town Of Old Port Tobacco

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

IN NEARBY southern Maryland old landed families like the Mitchells, Mudds and Hawkinses are collaborating cozily with such fancy brassed and scrambled egged newcomers as Admiral Frank Jack Fletcher, Rear Admiral Alex Sharp, Maj. Gen. de Witt Rich and the State Department's Peter Vischer, in planning the restoration of Charles County's oldest village, Port Tobacco.

Port Tobacco, now practically a ghost village, first made a map back in 1606 when legendary Capt. John Smith recorded it as the Indian village of "Potopaco." In 1639 Father Andrew converted the Potopacos queen to Christianity and from then on things boomed until silt resulting from deforestation of hills bordering the river, seriously encroached on the harbor.

The restoration plan has been blocked out by John Hanson Mitchell, a descendant of John Hanson, President of the Continental Congress, one of Port Tobacco's earliest settlers. The plan is to rebuild Port Tobacco Square where a small brick chapel, sole surviving wing of what was once a famous court house, still stands. Next step will be to dredge the creek, possibly make a boat basin. The financial end, and a tough problem, is being handled by H. Holland Hawkins, as president of the Society for the Restoration of Port Tobacco which has opened an information center in the town.

Among the famous neighboring houses is Habre de Venture, where Thomas Stone, signer of the Declaration of Independence once lived, and now owned by the Vischers. It's what's called "an architectural gem" and no one knows where its name came from or what it means. It's possibly of somewhat confused Huguenot origin—but among the numerous spellings on old maps, the Vischers have found "Haggedy's venture." The Port Tobacco restoration, incidentally, is geared to the realistic leisure of 10 years unless, of course, Mr. John D. Rockefeller steps in.

Report on Palm Tree

AT LAST this department's prized coconut palm is, we hope, settled for the winter. On the advice of Mrs. Myrtle H. Dick of Clinton, Md.—evidently a "palmist" of considerable experience—we had it potted in the following brew: a loam made of one third turfy loam, one third sand, one third leaf mold mixed at considerable expense by experts with old and dried stable manure and a 4-inch pot full of coarse bone meal to each bucketful of the above macedoine.

We are doing our level best to follow instructions not to let it get chilled in a draft, to keep it at a comfortable 60-degree temperature nights, not above 80 daytime, to water from below by setting in a secondary tub of water and to sponge its leaves tenderly with warm water to banish dust, spider (??) and some word we can't decipher!

To keep sufficiently alert for this new maternal role we've installed the palm in our bedroom, move it into the warm bathroom promptly at midnight (if home) and at all times keep a warm, damp cloth within reach. It's not the dust or even the spiders which get us down—it's that third unknown menace—the undeciphered word which everyone in the neighborhood has been trying to read!

Ninetieth Birthday

OCTOBER 27 is the ninetieth anniversary of President Theodore Roosevelt's birth. Picaresque incidents of the much loved "Teddy's" combustible life are recounted with easy frequency but it is too seldom remembered that he initiated our first exceedingly vital program for conservation of natural resources. Nowadays, world politics revolve with terrifying intensity around oil, uranium, minerals, lumber. Every school child is aware of their importance. Press campaigns, books like Fairfield Osborn's "Our Plundered Planet" have aroused us somewhat to the perils of dwindling resources.

But in prosperous, slap-happy turn of century times we decimated forests, chucked away natural wealth figuratively by the carload. It was the late Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, undoubtedly the first trained forester to hold gubernatorial office, who interested his friend, the President, in preserving our trees, setting up a national forestry service.

From forest conservation presidential attention turned to water power, to fighting monopoly of any natural resource. In 1906 a conference of Governors was called at the White House and soon after basic legislation, including setting up the first forest reserves, was effected. The Roosevelt conservation slogan was "The greatest good to the greatest number for the greatest time." It could be used handily today.

Later, Governor Pinchot, encouraged by T. R., suggested an international conference on natural resources believing it a sound preventive measure against war. When Taft succeeded Roosevelt the idea was shelved. But now the Roosevelt-Pinchot idea has been revived by the United Nations and, two wars later, there'll be an international get-together on natural resources next spring.

National Negro Women's Group Sponsors 'One World' Concert

Representatives of some 40 foreign counries last night participated in a 'One World Concert," sponsored by the National Council of Negro Women in the Interdepartmental Auditorium of the Labor Department. The colorful program, featuring native music and folk dances, was one of the high spots in the council's thirteenth annual conference which opened here last Sunday and will conclude tonight.

Throughout the four-day conclave "World Citizenship Through Human Understanding" has been spotlighted by the some 200 delegates. Last night's musical program was in keeping with the organization's theme.

Opening music for the concert was furnished by the United States Navy Band. Mrs. Marion H. Elliott, introduced the guests from the Diplomatic Corps, and Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, founder and president, NCNW, presided.

Several American Negro spirituals were presented by Howard University Accapella Choir under the direction of Warner B. Lawson. Other music depicting the world fellowship theme was given by Miss Heather Bowyer, English soloist; Wacclon Betlejewski, Polish organist; Miss Laura LeBlanch, Canadian pianist; Frantz Casseus, Haitian guitarist; Anna Koo, Chinese pianist; Mrs. Anne Chresohos, Greek soloist, accompanied by Mrs. Nicolos Arovanis.

Numbers were given by Cristobal Garza, Mexican solist, accompanied by Mrs. Ethel Ramos Harris; a Persian love song and dance by Miss Parveen Bakhtiar of Iran and Eastern folk dances by Miss Kalinda Kowshik.

A visit to the White House yesterday afternoon was the social highlight of the convention. In the absence of Mrs. Truman the delegates were received by Mrs. Julius Krug, wife of the Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Tom Clark, wife of the Attorney General, and Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, wife of the Postmaster General.

Dr. Bethune, just prior to the trip to the Executive Mansion, told the delegates, "Now, you're going to the White House. Don't be nervous. It is your right as an American citizen to go there.

"Last year we went and were received by Mrs. Truman. She seemed a little nervous," she continued, and added laughingly, "I suppose that was because she had never seen so many fine looking Negro women at one time. Mrs. Roosevelt, of course, had more and longer experience with us and never showed any signs of nervousness."

At the early afternoon session Mrs. E. R. Boutee, welfare consultant of the American Cancer Society, Inc., told the group that "more Negro women between the ages of 35 to 55 die from cancer than in other races." She attributed lack of post child birth care as one of the factors contributing to the high rate.

Basic techniques in community education were discussed by Dr. Julius Schreiber, psychiatrist of the National Institute on Social Relations, at the afternoon session. "Social action which jumps out of thin air without group discussion isn't likely to be effective," he said. "Group discussion compels us to reexamine our values."

Guests of honor at last night's concert included representatives of the various embassies.

Voters League Hears of Goals In Democracy

Dr. Claude E. Hawley, chief of the Division of Social Sciences, United States Office of Education, told the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters at a luncheon yesterday that a democracy must have certain goals, must know if it is moving toward or away from those goals.

The goals, as he, a professional social scientist, sees them, are shared knowledge, shared power, balanced economy, shared security, shared respect and shared skill.

In defining shared knowledge, Dr. Hawley stressed the fact that there must be a program to tell people of foreign nations about the United States.

Preceding Dr. Hawley's talk, Mrs. Clarence Fisher, chairman of the Absentee Voters Service, told members that over 3000 queries had been received at the information headquarters in the Star Building. Although the excitement of election was lost in the substitution of a mail box for a ballot box, Mrs. Fisher said those absentee votes might bring the vote back to the District.

At the board meeting held in the assembly room of the YWCA before the luncheon, the members decided to have a club member testify before the D. C. Commissioners" open hearing on October 21 on the District budget.

During United Nations Week, October 18-22, the league will sponso a "Know Your United Nations" program over WQQW at 9:45 a. m. daily.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. William Riggs Griffith of Beallsville, Md., announce the marriage of their daughter, Babette Riggs, to William Durnay Cissel of Waldorf Farm, Martinsburg, Md. The wedding took place October 8 in St. Peter's Church in Poolesville, Md.

Making Home Here

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome F. Margolius are making their home in Washington following a honeymoon spent in Canada. Mrs. Margolius is the former Miss Frances Jean Kaiser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Kaiser of this city.

Mr. Margolius, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Margolius, also of Washington, was graduated from George Washington University and is now studying for his master's degree at Johns Hopkins University.

Beta Sigma Phi Welcomes Pledges

The Xi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority will meet today, 7:30 p. m., at 1607 Eye st. nw. with Miss Betsy Hammer, president, presiding.

Miss Ruth Richards, vice president, will welcome the following new pledges: Misses Hope Kenney, Ann Gillespie, Winifried Scady, Nellie DeYoung, Eleanor Marquardt, Helen Dahl, Margaret Carey and Kathleen Patterson.

Daughter for Kirklands

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lane Kirkland announce the birth of a daughter, Louise Richardson, on October 10.

Mrs. Kirkland is the former Miss Edith Hollyday, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Hollyday of Bedford, N. Y. This is their third child.

Mrs. Hollyday, the former Miss Minna Blair of Washington, is here to make the acquaintance of her granddaughter.

Dr., Mrs. Robinson Move to Los Altos

Dr. and Mrs. Dwight Edwards Robinson and their daughter, Sarah Kip Robinson, of New York and Old Lyme, Conn., are establishing their new home in Los Altos, Calif., where Dr. Robinson is to join the faculty of the department of economics of Stanford University.

Mrs. Robinson is the former Miss Anne Somerville Grosvenor, daughter of Mrs. Charles Whitman of New York and niece of Gilbert Grosvenor of Washington. She made her debut in New York and Newport, R. I., in the 1937-38 season. She was formerly a reporter on the New York Daily News and a member of the staff of Life magazine.

Dr. Robinson served as a lieutenant in the Navy during the war.

Wins Fashion Honor

Miss Beebe Henderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson, was recently elected chairman of the Junior Class Executive Council at Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers in New York. The duty of the council is to assume leadership in student activities and student-faculty contact.

To Feature Colleen Moore's House

Home Show to Exhibit Doll Castle

REMEMBER that beautiful doll house, assembled by former movie star Colleen Moore?

It will be one of the most expensive and exquisite exhibits in the Annual Home Show-Exposition from October 16 through 24, at the National Guard Armory.

The fairy castle doll house is world famous now, for it has been on many a tour since Miss Moore had it made back in the '30s. Representing an investment of approximately $435,000, it constantly gets additions of interesting new objects collected by Miss Moore.

Colleen, petite star of "Flaming Youth" and "Lilac Time" in silent screen days, is now Mrs. Homer Hargrave of Chicago. The doll house was the outgrowth of a miniature collection made in her childhood. By 1929 she had so many miniatures that they overflowed her home, and her father suggested that they build a real doll house—one fit for a fairy princess.

It took nine years and 700 artisans to complete the turreted gray stone miniature castle. Though called a doll house, it weighs over 6000 pounds, stands 11 feet high, and is made of metal. There are 11 rooms, 2 bathrooms with running water, and over a mile of electric wiring. Made for a fairy princess 5 inches tall, the castle contains some 2000 tiny objects, including a weeping willow tree that really weeps, a 3-inch radio, and a chandelier with electric lights no larger than grains of wheat.

Among the myriad of other wonders is a modern library of handwritten books by noted authors, Cinderella's coach of silver, rock-a-bye baby tree that bends and sways in the breeze, two 400-year-old amber vases which once belonged to the Dowager Empress of China, a dining room which represents that of King Arthur, miniature paintings by Little Red Riding Hood, Snow White, and many other favorites of fairyland folklore.

The doll house is being brought to Washington by the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. Hours for the home show are 1 to 10:30 p. m. daily.

Keeping Frozen Foods

Your properly packaged frozen foods will keep in excellent condition for long periods if the temperature is maintained at zero. To make sure you serve them while they're at their top quality, appearance and flavor, the Consumers Institute of a large electrical appliance manufacturer recommends these storage periods: fatty fish and salted sausages, three or four months; unsalted sausage, poultry and pork, four to six months; lean fish and creamery butter, six to eight months; lamb, mutton, veal and hamburger, eight to 10 months, and fruits, vegetables, beef and eggs, 10 months to a year.

About Recipe for Baked Beans

I noticed someone asking about baked beans in your column recently, and want to send my bean recipe. People coming to have meals at our house (which is often) always plead: "Could you have baked beans the way you fix them? We love them!" Here's my recipe:

Fry three or four slices of bacon. Take out bacon and keep to put on top. Cut up a large onion in bacon grease. Get it brown. Pour in two cans of beans (not oven-baked nor the slow-baked kind). Add a tablespoon of brown sugar, salt, pepper, and a half cup of catsup. Stir as you heat all in skillet on top of stove about 10 minutes. I let mine simmer while I'm making cornbread to go with it, then serve with the strips of bacon on top.

F. G.

Many thanks, F. G., for your recipe.

What stores in Washington are representatives of the company which make Octagon soap? I have quite a few coupons which I would like to exchange for gifts? A. P. G.

Although this soap is carried by local stores, the nearest premium office seems to be in Baltimore. Write to Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., O'Sullivan Building, Baltimore, Md., for a catalog.

How can I dispose of old magazines accumulated during the past several years? G. E.

The Salvation Army welcomes such magazines. Telephone this organization at District 8023. Gallinger Hospital also likes to get fairly current magazines (those for the past few months). They can be left at the information desk at the hospital.

One of our readers asked about Consumer Reports. These are published by Consumers' Union, 38 East 1st st., New York City, 3. Membership is open to everybody for a reasonable fee. Automatic washers were rated in January, 1948; April, 1948; July, 1948, and May, 1948. These issues may be consulted in the technology room of the Public Library, 8th and K sts. nw., and may be taken out also. They are no doubt also in the Congressional Library, but cannot be taken out.

There is also Consumers' Research, Washington, N. J. This is very similar to Consumers' Union. Their reports are also available at the library. It would be well to look at both for a double check. S. U.

The publication a reader recently asked about was Consumers' Guide. However, it's possible she had in mind one of the two publications you mention. Thank you and other readers for writing us about them.

Group Moves For Woodlawn Preservation

A Nation-wide drive for funds to convert historic Woodlawn Mansion in nearby Virginia, into a public shrine will be launched by the newly formed Woodlawn Public Foundation, Inc., it was disclosed yesterday.

Officials of the foundation said plans for the campaign are now "in the process of organization." Campaign headquarters will be opened within the next few days at 511 10th st. nw., it was announced.

Plans for the campaign were revealed after Fairfax County Circuit Court approval of an agreement under which the Immaculata Heart of Mary Mission Society, Inc., surrenders its option on the estate to the foundation. The latter must raise the purchase price by January 3.

The Catholic group planned to convert the mansion, George Washington's wedding gift to his adopted daughter, Nellie Custis, into a boys' school.

The foundation announced appointment of Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and Robert Woods Bliss, former owner of Dumbarton Oaks, to its board of trustees.

FWA Starts Living Units For Non-Coms

Georgia Hall at Arlington Farms will be converted into a 79-unit apartment house for Army noncoms of the first three ranks, who have families of one or more children.

A $288,888 contract to convert the temporary structure has been signed with Washington Contractor Edward B. Friel, the Federal Works Agency announced yesterday.

The apartments, the FWA said, should be ready for occupancy in about five months. They will be two- and three-bedroom units and will be assigned on a hardship basis. There are about 500 noncommissioned officers on duty in the Washington area, an Army spokesman said.

Georgia Hall, one of 10 residence halls used as single-room living quarters for Government girls during the war, was closed last January. Six of the original halls still provide living quarters for 3660 Government girls, while three others have been converted into apartment units for junior grade Army officers with children.

Auto Meters Being Installed

Installation of 170 parking meters in the business section of Hyattsville along Rhode Island ave. and Baltimore Pike was nearly completed yesterday.

Each meter was placed in operation as it was installed and by today all of the meters in the old business section are expected to be in operation.

A charge of 1 cent for 12 minutes or 5 cents for an hour is made.

Installation of meters in the Queens Chapel Manor shopping center was being held up because of an injunction obtained by owners of the Queens Chapel Manor shopping center. The shopping center contends the sidewalks are private property.

City Policeman Kenneth Moureau has been detailed as meter man and Desk Clerk William A. Duvall of Hyattsville substation of the county police has been employed as a city policeman to replace Moureau.

House Moving, in Slow Motion, Brings County Board Action

The Washington Post

MAINTAINS A FIRM STAND—A house blocks Bethesda's Arlington ave., in the 7100 block. It was being moved to a new location when the job of transporting it stalled and has remained in the center of the roadway since Friday

A private home-moving project became public business yesterday when the Montgomery County government issued an ultimatum.

A house parked in the street at the end of the 7100 block of Arlington ave., Bethesda, must be moved by Saturday at 8 a. m.—or else, Montgomery County commissioners said.

The ultimatum was directed at Thomas W. Perry, Montgomery fuel dealer, who contracted with Basil R. Frazier, a Gaithersburg housemover, to move a 1½-story house three blocks from 7754 Wisconsin ave. to 196 Cordell ave.

Because Frazier had moved the house only 50 feet in 10 days, according to County Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter, the latter ordered the operation suspended last Friday.

Sauter recommended to the commissioners yesterday that Perry be given three days in which to complete the project. If the house is not moved, it then will be taken out of the street at Perry's expense, Sauter recommended.

"If we don't put some sort of a time limit on this operation, it's liable to be sitting there all winter blocking traffic," Sauter declared.

The board accepted his recommendations.

Club Bingo Ruled Out

Bingo played in Montgomery County country clubs, even though the winner collects only merchandise, is gambling and cannot be allowed, Montgomery County commissioners ruled yesterday.

The commissioners denied an application for a bingo permit by the Bethesda Country Club on Bradley blvd.

F. Barnard Welsh, county attorney, told the commissioners that Maryland State law allows bingo playing only by charitable, benevolent, religious, civic or educational groups or by fire departments.

The commissioners, on this advice, granted several bingo permits to church, fraternal, parent-teacher and volunteer firemen groups.

Welsh told the commissioners during the meeting at Rockville he found no provision in the State law allowing bingo playing by any private interest such as country clubs, whereupon the commissioners ruled adversely on the Bethesda club application.

The commissioners previously had backed up county police who shut down bingo games with a cash pay-off at Congressional Country Club.

At that time, commission President Brook Johns was critical of police action. Yesterday he said the State law on bingo is "the most narrow I've ever seen," and that "I'm going to fight it."

At the meeting, Walter F. Palmer, a trustee of the Washington Grove Elementary School, protested lack of adequate heating and toilet facilities at the school.

The commissioners agreed to underwrite $50,000 in bonds to be purchased by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for its sinking fund.

School Cost For Fairfax

A 10-year expansion program for Fairfax schools would cost about $19,066,737, officials have estimated.

The figure was reported by School Superintendent W. T. Woodson Monday night during a special joint meeting of the County School Board and the Fairfax Board of Supervisors.

Woodson said the estimate had been compiled at the request of G. Tyler Miller, Virginia's superintendent of public instruction, and would be sent to him.

The estimate would include the country's proposed $7,500,000 immediate expansion program, for which no funds are available. The Fairfax School Board has suggested a State sales tax as one means of raising the money.

The 10-year plan, Woodson said, is broken down into three divisions: immediate school needs, covered in the $7,500,000 proposal; needs for the period three to five years from now, and needs five to ten years hence.

The plan calls for 24 proposed new schools, 22 alterations or additions for white students, and five new schools and one addition for Negro pupils.

Zoning Board To Review Status Of Roomers Today

The District Zoning Commission today will weigh two important changes in existing regulations at a public hearing to be held in the District Building Board Room at 10 a. m.

One of the changes affects the future residence of an estimated 16,000 roomers, allowed to live in restricted "A" areas under a wartime amendment to the zoning act.

Another change would reduce the amount of off-street parking facilities which builders now are required to include when erecting apartment buildings. The change would stimulate erection of utility or bachelor apartments, it is believed.

Lower Profits Ratio Forecast On 1949 Sales

By S. Oliver Goodman

Sales will continue high next year but the profits ratio will be less than this year's. Regardless of the outcome of the November election, there will be no cut in Government employment.

Dr. Smith

Those are the views of Dr. George C. Smith, research economist of the United States Chamber of Commerce, as expressed before members of the Washington Advertising Club at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the Statler.

Further wage increases and other mounting expenses will reduce earnings, he said, but on the whole business in 1949 will be at a high rate. Management will find it has a better salesman job to do, Smith predicted, and will turn to more intensive advertising.

Washington is in an exceptionally good position to weather any future business recession, he declared, pointing to the 35 per cent increase in population here while the rest of the nation averaged only a 11 per cent gain. With Government employment again on the rise, there is "a solid core of spending power here" with little likelihood that a change in Administration will have much effect.

ODD LOTS: Major securities and commodity exchanges were closed yesterday in observance of Columbus Day. Washington banks, building and loan associations were open as usual . . . Falls Church, Va., will receive bids October 26 for a million-dollar water bond issue, dated October 1, 1948, and due October 1, 1952-78 . . . The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. yesterday asked ICC authority to issue $4,200,000 of equipment trust certificates . . . The National Hardware Show opened yesterday in New York City with some 24,000 products to be displayed through Saturday . . . Business failures in the week ended October 7 totaled 107, less than half of the prewar figure of 1939 but substantially above the 62 for the corresponding 1947 week . . . Hanna Furnace Corp. announced an increase of $3 a gross ton in all grades of pig iron produced at its Buffalo plant.

DOLLAR VELOCITY: An interesting development in the last 2½ years has been the increase in velocity of dollar turnover, observes George G. Bass of a New York investment firm. "In New York City for example," he pointed out, "an average deposit dollar turned over about 19 times. This year's rate appears to be approximately 25½ times. In a percentage way, the same thing has been occuring in the rest of the country. What it means is that people are spending their money faster so that a given volume of currency in circulation this year is doing about 30 per cent more work than was the case two years ago."

CREDIT AIDES TO MEET: The Chesapeake Chapter, Robert Morris Associates, will meet tomorrow night in the Mayflower. Roland T. Carr, chapter head, expects about 50 credit bankers from Baltimore and Washington to attend. Guest speaker will be Constantine Brown, newspaper columnist.

Business Outlook

Lewis Formulates Lewis Plan To 'Stabilize' Coal Output

By J. A. Livingston

AMONG THE ADJECTIVES coal operators use for John L. Lewis are tough, vain, courageous, brilliant, persuasive. But when they really want to go all out in unstinting praise, they'll say, "John's deep." In chess, John would see many moves ahead.

Once more, we have evidence of this. Lewis has found a use for the "willing and able" to work clause in the bituminous coal contract. He has decided to make himself marketing boss of the bituminous coal industry. He, not the coal operators, will measure out coal to the country.

Livingston

Lewis told the 3000 delegates to the United Mine Workers convention in Cincinnati: "If evil days come on the industry again, you'll find the United Mine Workers moving in. If there is only three days' work for this industry, we'll have three days work. If we are going to starve in this industry at any time, we'll just all starve together."

Lewis told the delegates that the "able and willing" clause gave the union the right to instruct its members how many days to work per week. Therefore, he will not permit some mines to operate only one or two days a week, while other mines operate five or six days. He is, to use Fred Allen's phrase, going to share the poverty.

LEWIS, as usual, has a case. Bituminous coal mining is an erratic way to earn a living. In 1900, miners averaged 234 days, work a year; in 1910, only 217. In 1918, the workyear jumped to 249 days, and then after the armistice dropped to 142 days. The industry afforded 203 and 219 workdays, respectively, in 1928 and 1929, but only 146 in 1932. The all-time high was during the war—278 days in 1944. Last year the average number of days worked was 249.

Those are averages, mind you. Last year some miners probably put in as many as 300 days and more, including Saturday and Sunday tricks. Others, working in marginal mines, put in as few as 100 days. The wider disparities in slack times Lewis would eliminate.

Lewis challenges tradition. Heretofore, the heads of companies have determined what to produce and how much. Marketing has been a managerial function. True, during the depression, and often at the behest of labor leaders, large companies frequently went in for share-the-work plans. They didn't cut production to do so. They merely spread out the production over as many workers as possible.

SHARE-THE-WORK plans did not stop individual manufacturers from competing for shares of the market. Indeed, often manufacturers would enlarge their market at the expense of other manufacturers and, coincidentally, at the expense of the other manufacturers' workers.

That's not for Lewis. To spread work, he would limit the work week regardless of whether a mine was rich-bodied and mechanized or poor and unmechanized, regardless of whether the output per man per day was 10 tons or less than 1 ton, regardless of whether a mine could sell coal at the minehead at $2 a ton or $6 a ton.

The economic consequences are obvious. Marginal mines would be able to sell their output, stay in business. The better mines, which would not be allowed to produce all they could sell, would be idled by the edict. Prices, production and employment would be frozen. The consumer would lose the advantage of competition.

This is not entirely new in coal. The Guffey Coal Control Act attempted something akin to that, but was declared unconstitutional. Later Congress enacted the Guffey-Vinson Act, which forbade individual coal producers to sell below their cost of production but did not limit production. Then the war came, prices rose and Congress allowed the law to lapse.

PENNSYLVANIA still has a production-control plan on the books. The State, the United Mine Workers, and anthracite producers fix a marketing quota weekly, which in turn determines production quotas. In this scheme, the consumer is represented—at least theoretically—by the State. The producer has a say, too.

So far, of course, the latest Lewis plan is just a threat. But if Lewis actually tries it, perhaps the United States Attorney General might find reason to move in on the UMW for monopolistic price-fixing in restraint of trade.

Indeed, some of the miners might object—those whom Lewis deprives of work. Lewis has got where he is by raising miners' pay, not by depriving them of it.

Republic Wins Concessions on Lease

War Assets Administrator Jess Larson yesterday offered provisionally to meet Republic Steel's terms for a lease on a Gadsden, Ala., blast furnace.

The provision is that Republic agree to use the Gadsden pig iron output to supply consumers hit by the lease of a Cleveland, Ohio, blast furnace to Kaiser-Frazer Corp. Both plants are Government-owned.

Larson in a letter to Charles M. White, president of Republic, offered what he termed "liberal concessions" on the $12,113,304 Gadsden furnace. The plant has an annual capacity of 280,000 tons of pig iron.

This is the tonnage that Republic says is needed to supply customers who got pig iron produced by Republic at Cleveland before WAA leased the plant to the motor car makers.

Prior to the Kaiser deal, Republic had operated the Cleveland furnace. The lease has been protested by Republic, by Preston Tucker, who plans to make a new automobile, and several foundry operators who claim they will lose their source of supply.

'Provocators' Muddle Issues, Sayre Asserts

Philadelphia, Oct. 12 (AP).—Belief that the high cost of living is caused by a "fundamental weakness in the American enterprise system" is the greatest internal danger now facing this country, the president of the National Association of Manufacturers said today.

In a speech prepared for a dinner meeting of the Eastern Pennsylvania Industrial Conference, NAM President Morris Sayre said:

"The people are being told today's prices are the result of the insatiable greed of business for profits.

"They're being told that the people's only hope is rigid, central Government controls. Bunk—bunk—and you and I know it."

Sayre said the American people must be "set straight on some of the issues which imported provocators, homegrown collectivists and screwball politicians are using to confuse us."

Recalling the "good old days" of from 25 to 40 years ago, Sayre declared that "25-cents-a-pound steak made just as big a dent in the $1, $2 or $3-a-day worker's pay of those times as $1-a-pound steak does in the tremendously increased worker's take-home pay today."

The five basic causes of high prices, Sayre said, stand out "like sore thumbs to anyone who'll take the trouble to look." Those five causes he listed as follows:

"1. The tremendously increased consumer purchasing power as a result of a money supply trebled since 1939.

"2. Three rounds of wage increases since V-J Day.

"3. High taxes and wasteful Government spending.

"4. Government-supported commodity prices.

"5. The effect of shortages of goods and materials as a result of our defense program."

Prices could be lowered, Sayre said, if the United States obtained "increased productivity per man, per machine, per factory, per industry."

This need for increased productivity, he said, places on industry the responsibility of finding investment money for expansion; on Government the responsibility for overhauling the tax structure to free venture capital from "the tax collector's clutches," and on labor the responsibility for abandoning "feather-bedding practices" and all restrictions on production.

Gen. Time Instruments Reports Loss in Period

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—General Instrument Corp. reported today a consolidated net loss of $89,163 for six months ended August 31, compared with a net profit of $539,100, or $1.10 a share, for the comparable period of 1947.

More Florida Oranges, Less Grapefruit Seen

Lakeland, Fla., Oct. 12 (AP).—More oranges and less grapefruit are forecast for Florida this season.

The first Governmene estimate, which may be revised monthly during the season, predicts a total of 99 million boxes of fruit. This is far less than the 110 to 120 million boxes expected by most of the citrus industry.

The first Government estimate, the grapefruit crop at 31 million boxes. This is two million boxes less than was shipped, canned or thrown away during the 1947-48 season.

O'Boyle Hits Secularism In Welfare

Boston, Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Increasing secularism in welfare was attacked in an address here tonight by Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle of Washington, D. C.

Archbishop O'Boyle, who is national spiritual director of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, said: "The problem of increasing secularization of all departments of life . . . in time will necessarily result in the lowering of human values and the cheapening of human life. The ultimate upshot will be the revival of brutality and barbarism in all human relationships."

"We should . . . resist every effort indicative of a trend to a totalitarian state which would capriciously and arbitrarily undertake to do in welfare what can be done efficiently and constructively by individuals and voluntary associations of free men."

The archbishop indorsed Government subsidy to provide adequate housing, saying "there is no evidence in sight today that private enterprise can reach the very large numbers of people living in blighted areas at the present time."

Although lauding labor unions, cooperatives, and credit unions, he said they nevertheless must be "invigorated even more with Christian enthusiasm and Christian ideals."

The Archbishop spoke at a dinner of the National Conference of Catholic Charities and other welfare groups.

Postlude

Contralto Displays Fine Voice

By Paul Hume

Mary Alyce Bennett, contralto, gave the second concert in a series at the Institute of Contemporary Arts, singing in the recital hall of that progressive school.

Her program was in keeping with the exhilarating mood of the institute, drawing upon Purcell and Mozart, Debussy, Chavez and William Graves. Miss Bennett, a faculty member of Washington's newest art center, displayed a fine contralto voice. She makes good use of delicate soft tone, and can boast rich, sound top notes.

More unusual than her vocalism is her musicality. In Carlos Chavez' taxing songs she was perfectly willing and able to maintain her own line in one key while the piano was carrying on in a different tonality. Harry McClure gave fine support through most of the recital, failing only momentarily in Mozart's exacting figurations. The best singing came in Mozart and Purcell, though the coloratura work of the latter was occasionally less than clear.

An impurity of vowels makes Miss Bennett's enunciation fuzzy, though she sings as one who is fully conversant with the inner meaning of her texts. This robbed her French songs of their chief beauty. For French, above other European languages, depends upon absolutely pure distinction in vowels.

The singer, who in private left is Mrs. Graves, may be forgiven a charge of nepotism in programming her husband's songs. His settings of three sonnets of Gerard Manley Hopkins are filled with a fine sense of the mood of the poems, and an unusual and appropriate feeling, of motion.

If the poem opening with the great lines, "The world is charged with the grandeur of God" had been matched at its close we would have a mastersong. Perhaps the composer can yet find a more convincing terminal for one of the most powerful utterances of nineteenth century literature. We continue in our debt to the New York Avenue Institute.

Fairfax Girl, 6, Injured When Struck by Auto

A 6-year-old Fairfax County girl was slightly injured yesterday when she was struck by an automobile after alighting from a school bus, county police reported.

Helen M. Smith, of Route 4, Alexandria, was treated at Alexandria Hospital for abrasions of both knees as the result of the accident, which occurred at the intersection of Blunt's lane and Telegraph rd., a short distance from the child's home.

Police listed the driver of the car as Harvey Richardson, 28, of 1606 Boyle st., Alexandria, who brought the child to the hospital in his own car. He was charged with reckless driving.

Russia Has Atom Bomb, Churchill Told U. S. Woman

Ilion, N. Y., Oct. 12 (AP).—The widow of a former Assistant Secretary of the Navy said today that Winston Churchill told her last spring Russia already had the atom bomb and would have timing and fusing perfected within a year.

Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson, who lives near here, told the Ilion Travelers Club she sat next to Britain's former Prime Minister at a dinner in London.

"I asked him about a rumor I had heard in Washington that Russia had the atom bomb, but didn't have the timing and fusing, and that it wouldn't be perfected there until 1952," Mrs. Robinson said.

Churchill told her, she added, that "Russia has the atom bomb and will have the timing and fusing within a year."

Mrs. Robinson's husband, who served under President Coolidge, was a nephew of the late President Theodore Roosevelt.

Lutherans Vote to Join World Body

Fremont, Ohio, Oct. 12 (AP).—The American Lutheran Church's biennial convention today voted to join the World Council of Churches after a bitter floor fight.

The Rev. John A. Belman of Sheboygan Falls, Wis., one of the opposition leaders, criticized the council as a possible Communist front organization.

"Isn't it true," he asked, "that a lot of people within the council are Communists? Do we, as Christians, want to be affiliated with an organization of that nature?"

Dr. Harold Yocum, president of Capital University at Columbus, Ohio, and one of the two American Lutheran Church delegates to the recent council meeting in Amsterdam, replied:

"The best answer to that is that the Russian delegation refused to come because it said it considered the meeting stacked against the Russians."

Dr. Emmanuel Poppen, general president of the American Lutheran Church, called for unanimous approval of a resolution favoring participation in the World Council. There were only a few scattered votes.

Operation Is Success On Premature Baby

Philadelphia, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia today disclosed that a successful major operation was performed on a three-day-old premature boy weighing only four and one-half pounds.

The operation was to remedy a serious congenital defect in which the esophagus opened into the windpipe and nourishment taken by the child went into the lungs.

The baby was born September 9 and the operation was performed September 12. The hospital said the baby now weighs 5 pounds, 11 ounces and will be discharged from the hospital this week.

MARK TRAIL

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Like Royalty, Shirley Travels Incognito

The Louis Michelsons of 2906 Erie st. se. were at dinner one night last week when 5-year-old Barbara asked whether it would be okay to invite her kindergarten girl friend, Susie, to be an overnight houseguest.

"Not right now, dear," soothed Mama. "Some other time."

Friday afternoon, Barbara returned from school with another 5-year-old in tow.

"This is my friend Susie," she explained. "You said it would be all right some other time, so this is another time and Susie has come to spend the night with me."

"My name," said the newcomer firmly, "is not Susie. It's Judy."

"Hello, Susie . . . er, Judy," said Mrs. Michelson. "Does your mother know you're going to sleep here tonight?"

It was obvious from the looks on the faces of the two little girls that they had overlooked the detail of checking with the visitor's mother.

Mrs. Michelson frowned. "Your mother is going to be worried . . . er, Judy. What's your last name?"

"Petucci."

"Do you have a telephone at home?"

"Yes, but it's not connected yet."

"Do you know where you live?"

"Oh, sure. You go straight down that street the school is on until you come to . . ."

"Oh, dear," said Mrs. Michelson. "This will never do. We've got to get you home to your mother before she gets worried. I'll call my husband, and he'll drive us over, and you'll show us the way, Judy."

"Okay."

Lou came home, loaded them all into the car, and set off. Susie-Judy pointed the way. When they turned into the 3400 block of 25th st. se., the little girl exclaimed. "That's where I live," and hopped out of the car. Her older sister saw her coming, and shouted:

"Mom! It's all right, Mom. Shirley Ann is home."

"'Shirley Ann?'" muttered Lou. "I thought her name was Susie. Or Judy Petucci."

Mama came running from the house, and gathered her daughter in her arms.

"She's not Susie and she's not Judy Petucci," she sighed. "She's Shirley Ann Albert; this is my husband, Louis, and I'm Cora. Thanks for bringing her home. We were frantic. The police scoured the whole neighborhood and we just couldn't imagine . . ."

"But how come she's Shirley Ann and Judy and Susie all at the same time?"

"Oh, that—that's an old story with her. She's whatever name she's heard last on the radio, or at the movies. You're lucky she didn't tell you she was Roy Rogers."

Yessir—when they're not scaring the daylights out of you, children are certainly a joy and a comfort.

IT MERELY PUMPS RED ICE-WATER

The Russians proudly announce that their scientists have learned how to remove the hearts of both warm and cold-blooded animals, and replace them with other hearts.

In the case of Mr. Molotov, that wouldn't appear to be much of a trick. In fact, they could probably skip the second half of the experiment without any noticeable effect.

ULTIMATUM

During the war, we made out as best we could. When the paint came off the toothpaste tube, and stuck to our fingers, the manufacturer had a ready alibi.

"It's the war, you know. Can't get frattis-graffle any more, and the labels won't stick to the metal without frattis-graffle."

So we patiently tried to find a way to fold the end of the tube without getting our fingers fouled up with flakes of paint. But now the war is over, and by golly I'm getting sick and tired of ersatz paint jobs. Lucky Strike Green may still be on the "missing" lists, but most other shortages have been licked.

So I'm serving notice to all toothpaste manufacturers:

You're going to lose one heretofore steady customer unless you go back to prewar tubes.

And if that doesn't bring you to your knees, I'll even stop listening to your radio programs.

MEDICAL CURIO

I am probably suffering from the most protracted case of spring fever ever known to medical science.

PRESS AGENT STUNT?

The news columns reported recently that Gaylord S. Gilbert and Francis J. Sullivan had been admitted to practice before the Supreme Court.

I spent the rest of the afternoon hunting through the theatrical notices for an announcement that "Trial By Jury" was being revived, but found nothing. Must be a different Gilbert and Sullivan.

"EX" MARKS THE MINER

One UMW delegate voted against doubling the salary of John L. Lewis.

There's a chap who apparently wants to become a former coal miner.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—New York theater operators decided against showing the Dewey campaign-newsreel as paid advertising. The substitute arrangements provide for a Truman newsreel to be made, and 3000 prints of both newsreels will be distributed to all exhibitors as part of the usual newsreel release . . . The Social Security Administration will reprint and distribute "Old Man Minick" to their employes for training purposes, because it explains the problems of old age. This story was produced on Broadway by Winthrop Ames in 1924 . . . Evelyn Waugh, the British novelist, will tour American colleges this fall.

Carleton Smith, the music critic, spent a week in Finland with Sibe'ius, at the composer's home in Jarvenpaa. He told Smith when he visited here in 1914, he thought that the best music in America was made by Niagara Falls; now he likes Aaron Copeland's music . . . All packages sent to him from abroad, and addressed simply to "Sibelius, Finland," invariably reach the composer. The Finnish government pays him an annuity for life, and permits packages to be sent him duty-free. "The only thing I really need," he told Smith, "are the biggest, best Havana cigars. To me, they are food."

An old style, classical debate will be held this month between the New York Young Democratic Club, and the New York Young Republican Club. The topic naturally will be: "Should The Democrats or Should The Republicans Be Elected?" . . . Virginia Leigh, the debutante-columnist, is working at Republican National Headquarters . . . Frances Parkinson Keyes, the novelist, sent a cable to Lum Fong's asking if she'd left her unfinished manuscript there last month. It was found, and Lum Fong sent it to Mrs. Keyes in London . . . Charles H. Goren, the bridge expert, learned that two of his bridge books were to be given as first prizes to the winners of the Philadelphia Bridge Tournament. "My books," he notified the judges," should go to the runners-up. The winners won't need them."

BRUNER

Barnaby and Mr. O'Malley by Pharo and Morley

The old Hegdisch estate, Barnaby! It's been sold!
The old what?
John! The property the town was intending to buy from the Hegdisch estate for the new school annex! It's been sold!
The whole estate?
Oh, I'm sure an agreement can be reached with the new owner for that little strip of land. This won't affect anything really—
The house on that estate is where my old friend Gus the Ghost is living!
Poor Gus!
That old haunted house?

Famed Names At W. & L. Confuse Cop

By Drew Pearson

Chief Justice Fred B. Vinson is not going to Moscow and his name, therefore, will not become a by-word with the Russian people. Down in Virginia, however, his name is so well known that it caused a Virginia traffic cop to rub his eyes.

Pearson

Among the students at Washington and Lee University happen to be the grandson of a late famous Virginia Senator, the great-grandson of a famed Civil War hero and the son of a Chief Justice. All three were riding together near Lexington, Va., when arrested for speeding.

The policeman, proceeding to book them, asked their names.

"Robert E. Lee 4th," replied the first student.

It happened that he was telling the truth. The traffic cop looked up quizzically, but wrote the name down, then asked for the next name.

"Carter Glass 3d," was the reply.

The cop wrote the name down, then queried the third student.

"What's yours?"

"Fred M. Vinson, jr.," replied young Vinson.

"Then my name's Napoleon," exclaimed the flustered cop, and let all three boys go.

Note—Mrs. Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, suggested to her son that after graduating at Washington and Lee he might want to take his law degree at Yale. A Yale degree, she intimated, might give him a better springboard into the legal fraternity. Replied her son: "Little old Center College (Kentucky) was good enough for dad, wasn't it?"

Parnell Thomas Again

Most readers of this column, judging by the mail, heartily disapprove of Congressman J. Parnell Thomas' system of salary kickbacks from clerks and stenographers. However, one or two readers have asked why I singled out Chairman Thomas.

The answer is that Thomas was not singled out. For many years this column has exposed kickbacks and nepotism among Congressmen wherever they existed and regardless of political party, Thomas got no worse treatment than the others.

The first Congressman this column exposed for salary kickbacks was Representative Richard Kleberg of Texas, of the famed King Ranch, largest cattle ranch in the world. Kleberg was a Democrat. The people of Texas promptly rose up and removed him from office.

Another Congressman exposed for kickbacks was Representative Ed Rowe of Akron, Ohio, Republican, who required his secretary, Miss Margaret Nelson, to kick back around $112 a month out of her $212 salary to pay certain of Rowe's expenses. The voters of Ohio promptly saw to it that Rowe did not go back to Washington.

Contrary to some people's opinions, most Congressmen have clean, honest records when it comes to kickbacks. Only a small minority practice it. The salaries received by their clerks and stenographers are paid by the United States Government, not by the Congressmen, and the clerks and stenographers are entitled to the full amount. Most of them earn it.

Other members of the Un-American Activities Committee have clean records when it comes to kickbacks and nepotism. And their chairman is hurting the cause for which the committee was established—good Americanism—by stooping to illegal and unethical practices.

Our world

Your kind of world and mine, my dear . . . Are not so far apart . . . Because the boundaries of both . . . Depend upon the heart . . . It does not matter where you go . . . Or what your eyes may see . . . But only where your feelings are . . . And what you think of me . . . Oh, I will make you glad if you . . . Will only let me try . . . And I can even promise you . . . That you will never cry . . . Unless your tears are happy ones . . . When you are half asleep . . . Because your joy is more than you . . . Believe that you can keep . . . Let not the blinding rain conceal . . . The beauty of the sun . . . But let me take your world and mine . . . And blend them into one.
